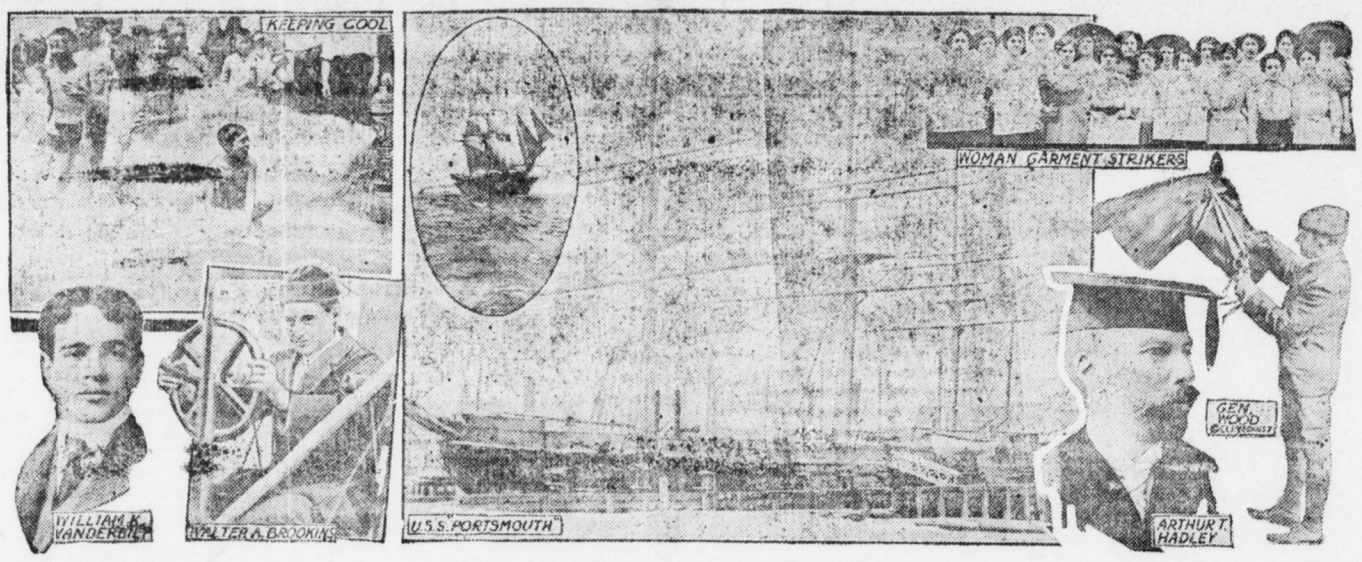
Employes of the Grand Trunk railway in Canada, numbering 2,500 men, go on strike.



News Snapshots Of the Week

Last of United States wooden war vessels, the Portsmouth, is to go out of active service and may become a museum or be sold as old junk. Arthur T. Hadley, president of Yale university, has been asked by President Taft to head committee which will investigate "watered" stock issues of railroads. 6,225 feet, the record for high flying, was made by Aviator Walter A. Brookins at Atlantic City. Fountains, fire hose and hydrants play important parts in hot weather scenes in New York. From an unceasing round of pleasure to the hard work entailed in the duties of an active official of the New York Central lines is the change W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has taken. General Leonard Wood commenced his duties as chief of staff of United States army. Women garment workers struck in New York.

Reception.

Rev. J. L. Bogue, pastor of First Baptist Church was tendered a reception, in the church parlors, last Monday evening. Of course the occasion, interspersed with music, social chat and light refreshments made the evening doubly pleasant. Rev. Bogue is an untiring worker and popular with all classes and churches.

Handsome Flowers.

Mrs. John Cummings, wife of Ex-County Treasurer, can consider our hat off for a beautiful bouquet of flowers sent to the sanctum of ye editor on Tuesday morning, at the hands of Miss Corinne Cummings, the pleasant little daughter of Mr. Thos. Cummings. Our kind donor always has a beautiful flower garden, in fact keeps the grounds around their cozy home always looking fine—setting an example for others to follow.

Pine Camp Meeting and Institute.

Now is the time when the woods are calling and many are responding to the call and going to the Pines for their vacation, where in Cottage or Tent, in some cool corner or quiet nook, a week or two will be spent in close touch with Nature and with Nature's God. Among the places that many will visit, Pine Camp Grounds holds a prominent place. The grounds are situated on the P. R. R., at Pine Station, Penna., sixteen miles west of Williamsport and eight miles east of Lock Haven and within hailing distance of Jersey Shore and Avis.

Attractive Exhibit.

The Representatives of the International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, have placed a very attractive and free exhibition of the corrected lessons, drawings, outfits and books of the different students, and views of the schools in the Fetter building, Fourth street. Owing to this being an educational exhibit, it is attracting unusual attention. If you have not already attended, it would be well worth your while to take the time and call as there is a Representative in constant attendance to explain their system of teaching.

Sad Death.

The fatal accident that befell the little seven year old daughter of Mr. Wm. Smith, on North Creek, mention of which is made by our correspondent in the North Creek items, is indeed deplorable. Like most children she delighted to hang onto the chain under the hay rack. How she came to get under the wheels of the loaded wagon we are unable to learn. The wheel passed over her left hip, causing internal injuries from which she died on Tuesday morning, before Dr. Falk was summoned. The funeral takes place to-day, under the direction of funeral director, C. W. Rishell.

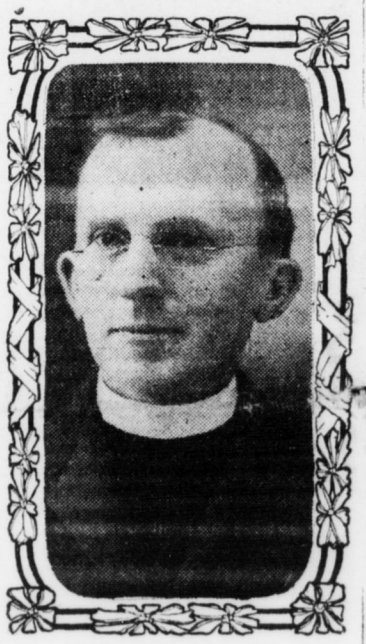
What's Doing?

There must be considerable attractions at St. Marys for the young, judging from the large number of young men from Emporium calling there, especially on Sunday. We notice Fred Viner and Oscar Foster, two heart smashers, were up on Sunday.

Much Needed Vacation.

Miss Elizabeth Lechner, one of the obliging and efficient clerks in Emporium post office, has taken a much needed vacation, having gone to Erie and other places to pass two weeks. Miss Caroline Huff, former assistant, has taken Miss Lechner's place during her absence.

NEW RECTOR AT EMMANUEL CHURCH



REV. M. L. TATE.

TRINITY RECTORY,
TYRONE, PA., JULY 19TH, 1910.

GREETING!

Grace, mercy and peace to you be multiplied.

The call to become your Rector has been received I have informed the Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, S. T. D., of your action, and having received favorable reply from him. I accept your call. I will come (D. V.) so that I can be with you for the Tenth Sunday after Trinity, Sunday, July 31st.

Praying that God's richest blessings may rest upon you, I am,

Yours Very Sincerely,

M. L. TATE.

Taken From Train.

F. M. Conant, of Cincinnatti, O., who has been guest of his friend Dr. Bush, at this place, for consultation relative to a serious case of lung trouble. He left here on Sunday for home but was taken off the train at Buffalo, being in a serious condition and conveyed to Emergency Hospital. Dr. Bush was wired for and went to Buffalo on Monday. He found his friend had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs and was in a critical condition and will be compelled to remain at Buffalo for a time. Mr. Conant, made many friends here who deeply sympathized with him in his trouble, so patiently bourne.

Missionary Society.

The Ladies Missionary Society of West Creek met at the home of Mrs. P. R. Beattie on Sixth street, last Friday morning. In addition to the business there was a "quilting," when all joined in congratulating Mrs. Beattie upon her 76th birthday. All enjoyed the pleasant occasion. Promptly at noon all sat down to an elegant dinner, furnished by the ladies, 31 being present. Those from out of town were: Mrs. Peterson and daughter, Cameron, Mrs. Lizzie Morse, St. Marys; Iva Taylor and daughter, Hicks Run.

Gone to Rochester.

Mr. Carl Mumford, son of Councilman and Mrs. E. D. Mumford, of this place, has accepted and entered upon his duties as clerk at Hotel Eggleston, Rochester, N. Y., lately purchased by Mr. W. G. Gilbert. Carl while clerk at Hotel Warner, this place, was popular with the public and exceedingly polite and attentive to his duties. We have not the least fear but that he will be equally as popular at Rochester, being a young man of strict, correct habits—in brief a gentleman.

Mangled Remains Found.

Arthur Cousins, aged about 70, who has resided in this conuty for several years, being employed as expert truck gardener by various farmers. Cousins was a great success so far as his work went but the poor fellow had one terrible failing—drink. Lately he had been in charge of the Climax truck patch, but stopped work about a week ago. On Tuesday evening he boarded passenger train No 61, wanting to get off at Beechwood, but for some reason was carried to Rathbun, when he was told to get off, which he did and started to walk to Jacob Andrews. We are told a freight coming east noticed him on the track, stopped and put him out of danger, but no doubt he had remained on the track or laid down, Erie mail coming east having run over him, crushing frightfully—beyond recognition. Had it not been for a bank book found near his remains it is doubtful if he could have been identified. His remains were found by some trackmen about one mile east of Rathbun. Cousins came to this country from Huddersfield, Yorkshire, England, where his family of ten children reside. Poor weak man; he might have been a valuable man as a farmer, being very competent. His remains were taken to LaBar's undertaking rooms, to be prepared for burial.

This (Thursday) afternoon the funeral took place at LaBar's Undertaking Rooms, Rev. J. F. Anderson, of the M. E. Church, officiating.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

HARRIS.

MRS. FLORA HARRIS, aged about 40, died at Buffalo and Monday. Her remains will arrive to-day noon and taken to Newton Cemetery. Religious services will be conducted at the grave by Rev. J. F. Anderson, pastor M. E. Church. C. W. Rishell took charge of the funeral at Junction. We have no other particulars.

Serious Accident.

On Monday evening, while tearing down an old barn on the Elihu Chadwick farm, Mr. Jas. Peasley, Forestry Warden for that district were seriously injured. Mr. Peasley is suffering from a lacerated scalp while Mr. Chadwick is not seriously injured but being well advanced in years was considerably bruised and jammed. Under Dr. H. S. Falk's careful care we hope he will be about looking after delinquent taxpayers.

Well Earned Rest.

Mrs. C. G. Schmidt, who lately retired from the bakery, business she successfully conducted since the death of her husband, was a PRESS business caller yesterday. Mrs. Schmidt will take a well earned vacation, leaving on Monday next for Berwick, Pa., and other points of interest to visit relatives and friends for several weeks. Mrs. S. proved herself a good business woman.

Birthday Party.

Miss Eloise Warner, the bright seven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Warner, entertained a party of little ladies and gents yesterday afternoon, in honor of her 7th anniversary. Of course they passed an enjoyable afternoon and remained until evening. Elaborate refreshments were served. Miss Eloise was the happiest little lady in Emporium yesterday and was remembered with many nice tokens of esteem by her guests.

Big Improvements at Furnace.

The very extensive improvements at the Emporium Furnace are rapidly advancing. The new brick cast house, erected by Fitzpatrick Brothers, is now ready for the roof. The stock house is being completely remodeled, the floor being paved with brick while concrete pier foundations are now, ready for the trestling and tracks. The cupalo will be torn down and an up-to-date one erected. Everything is being put in shape and Mr. Brady is not sparing money to make the old Emporium Furnace, after a very successful run of eleven years under his able management, good for many more years—we hope prosperous ones. It will take several more weeks before this great hive of industry will be in full blast.

The Circus in Town.

The famous circus arrived in Cohoes during the small hours of the day and the experienced workmen erected the big tents with the rapidity with which the mushroom springs from the pasture lot. The layman invariably marvels at the ease and quickness with which the circus men build the huge canvasses from a comparatively chaoctic intricacy of ropes pulleys and poles. If one believed in the power of magicians, one would almost declare that every big circus must employ a wonderful magician to wave his wand over the men when they erect the tents. However, the combined efforts of all the magicians on the face of the earth would not prove effacious in the matter of building the white tops, for there isn't a bit of magic connected with the work at all. It is simply system that does the trick—a splendid system which is carefully adhered to by every working man, from the superintendent down to the humblest canvassman. And to the careful observer this system is truly remarkable.

To the infinite joy of the small boy and his sister and to the evident delight of the older folks, the circus parade replete and resplendent in majectic, scintillating, bewildering beauty, was taken over the principal streets of Cohoes thir morning. And the pageant, made a decidedly favorable impression on all who thronged the line of march.

The doors will be open at seven o'clock this evening and the performance will start at eight.—Cohoes Republican.

The famous Frank A. Robbins circus will exhibit in Emporium, Tuesday, Aug. 2nd.

Wonderful Bargain Sale.

H. A. Zarps & Company, proprietors of the Great Store, so popular throughout the entire county, has something new to say in this issue of the PRESS, especially attractive to the ladies. Mr. Zarps, the senior proprietor, says he has too many goods, in fact he will be simply forced to reduce his immense line, hence he is now selling almost everything far below the cost price. He is deeply in earnest and says he will reduce his goods to a reasonable size stock even if he has to sell for one-half what they cost.

Celebrates His 74th Birthday.

Our respected townsman Mr. N. Seger, on Monday last (18th) celebrated in a modest manner the 74th anniversary of his birth, surrounded by his faithful wife, brother and children, as well as grand-children. Mr. Seger came to Emporium in 1865 and entered the merchant tailoring and clothing business, having continued to this day at the helm. He prospered by hard work, economy and honorable dealing and to-day ranks as one of the most solid business men of our town, occupying the responsible position as one of the board of directors of The First National Bank of this place, with now almost a million dollar capital. We hope our good friend and citizen may live to celebrate many more anniversaries. A pleasant incident and surprise was the visit of his sister, Mrs. Josephene Singler and daughter Miss Lucy, of Chicago, Ill.,—the former being guest of her brother Mr. and Mrs. R. Seger and family, while Miss Lucy is guest of Mr. and Mrs. N. Seger and family.

A Good Team.

The PRESS sanctum was visited yesterday by two pleasant gentlemen, Mr. John E. Smith, of Sterling Run and Mr. C. A. Ramsey, of Erie, Pa., representing The Hostettler Shoe Co. Both are very companionable gentlemen and active in the business world. Almost every citizen in this county knows Mr. Smith and appreciates his worth to this county, socially as well as business.

Homeward Bound.

A post-card from Dr. S. S. Smith and A. A. MacDonald to the PRESS, dated Soades Point, Ont., July 15th, says: "We have turned our faces homeward. All is well."

All work guaranteed.

Young Lad Wins Honors.

From the Boston Globe we note the following reference to J. Paul Lynch, of Roxbury, Mass., son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Lynch, formerly of this county:

"Master J. Paul Lynch, 13 years old, of 1632 Tremont St., who was graduated from the Mission church parocial school in June, was one of 250 who took examinations, and was the youngest of the four who won scholarships in the Boston high school.

These scholarships are worth $250 and they enable those winning them to take the course at the school preparatory to entering the college.

Young Lynch's success is due to some hard work, and he is pretty well pleased with his efforts.

"When we had our school examinations I was a little careless," said he last night, "and I was beaten for first honors in the class, my mark being 96.4 I think it taught me a lesson, for I made up my mind that I would win at the Boston examinations, and I have just been notified that I did so."

Embarrassing Error.

Errors, or omissions, take place in the best regulated newspaper offices. Last week we omitted the item relating to the party given by Misses Eathel and Nancy Turley, after careful pains to secure the same. However, we shall insert the same this week, if it be a little late, at the same time asking the forgiveness of the fair young ladies.

"On Tuesday evening, Misses Eathel and Nancy Turley, the pleasant daughters of our respected merchant, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Turley, West Fifth Street, in honor of their guest, Miss Geneva Evans, of Warren, Pa. The evening was was pleasantly passed with games, music, billiards and general good time, continuing until midnight, when very elegant refreshments were served.

The following guests were present:

Misses Geneva Evans, Margaret Crandell, Vera Steele, Jessie Moran, Grace Halderman, Florence Beck, Clare Lathrop, Ina Hopple, Marguerite Faucett, Jessie Clark, Ruth Pearsall, Carolyn Moore, Belle Campbell, Nancy Turley, Florence Lingle, Addie Proiser.

French railroads are reported to have forbidden kissing in the stations with a view to accelerating train service. O, that's all right. Let the trains pull out. Most of the osculators are not passengers. It's a habit and the station the best place to indulge in it without attracting undue attention.

The women of a church in New York are to have a church-going hat. The ungallant men complained of the big hats, which prevented them from seeing the preacher, and the women agreed to a reform. The men had threatened to quit the church, but the women countered by leaving them without a plausible excuse.

A Chicago paper says that it is uncertain whether St. Louis, Boston or Baltimore will prove to be the fourth city in the country in population. As St. Louis was about 66,000 ahead of Baltimore and 15,000 ahead of Boston, ten years ago, and growing much faster than either, this is a cruel kick from an old-time rival.

Nine thousand men will be employed in taking the census in Canada next year. The department of agriculture does the work over there, and members of the party not in power declare that the census means that a fat slice will be divided among "the smaller type of partisans." Methods of taking the census on this side of the line have much improved in recent years. Probably Canada will folow suit in time.

And now a Japanese spy has been captured in Ecuador. It appears that Japan is offering to help Peru in case of war with Ecuador. The vigilance of our anti-Japanese talkers has evidently foiled the Mikado, and since he despairs of getting a foothold in this country he is intriguing in South America. Since the trouble has shifted to Ecuador, perhaps Mr. Hobson and his fellows will be quiet for a while.

The United States and Mexico have taken the initial steps toward making international regulations for traffic in the air. Certain provisions of the agreement will permit governments to treat as smugglers or pirates those who fly across the border without due regard for the customs laws. Apparently if we are to have airships for business and pleasure we must also have aerial war vessels and revenue cutters.

The latest cotton report shows conditions distinctly improved as compared with those of last year at the same date. The warmer weather prevailing in the south may be counted on to hasten maturity and possibly will increase the output over even the present estimate. Fears of a shortage have had a somewhat serious effect on the market, but the slump in prices shows that some speculators at least have overreached themselves.

An Ohio cow has for the last three years worn a wooden leg. She probably does not kick over the pail with her one time facility.

Another peril is threatened by the new era of aviation. A cow choked to death while trying to swallow a small balloon that came down.

NEW BUSINESS VENTURE

PEOPLE KNOW TAFT

MUCKRAKERS' USELESS EFFORT TO DISCREDIT HIM.

Latest Attempt, In Connection With the Ballinger Case, Is Ludicrous —The Facts Stated From a Disinterested Standpoint.

The latest attempt to discredit the president of the United States is perhaps the lowest which has yet been ventured by his enemies or by the muckrakers whose only object is to make money by selling slander and defamation of character. It is a story told by a stenographer in the interior department, for what inducements is not definitely known, about the preparation of a statement of the Glavis case—the Glavis part of the Ballinger case—which seems to have been adopted by President Taft as the groundwork whereon he based his letter to Ballinger, acquitting him and sustaining him, and authorizing the dismissal of Glavis.

Taking the Kerby story as it stands, the charge made is easily boiled down to an assertion that the president was given a draft of a letter which he might have adopted as his own, had he so desired, and sent to Ballinger, and that he did, in fact, make it the base of his letter, differently worded. It is like saying that a judge took a carefully prepared brief submitted by a lawyer, looked it over, considered it a week or so, and then adopted its views as substantially his own.

There is nothing mysterious or suspicious about such a transaction. It is the kind that takes place constantly among men busy with large affairs. It adds nothing of importance to the Ballinger case. As for the story luridly "played up" in yellow papers, about the burning "at night"—in the evening—of discarded drafts and unused notes pertaining to the statement submitted to the president, it may add, for the hour, to the gayety of the nation, but it has no bearing upon the merits of the Ballinger case.

As for that grave matter, the position of the country—of every honest man and decent newspaper—is still that the truth, the whole truth and the truth only, must be brought to light and made the basis of the popular and official verdict. It is relatively unimportant who may be hurt or benefited, or what the political consequences may be. Truth, right and justice are the vital factors in the case. Nothing else should count.

The New Commerce Court.

There will be general approval, we believe, of the action of the house at Washington in amending the administration railroad bill in respect to the manner of appointing the proposed interstate commerce court.

The measure as presented by Mr. Taft's cabinet provided for the appointment by the president of five members of the court with power to pass upon appeals from the decisions of the interstate commerce commission. The house amendment provides that the president shall have power to appoint five additional circuit judges and that the justices of the supreme court shall select from all the circuit judges of the country five who shall make up the personnel of the commerce court.

The first natural and desirable result of this amendment will be to remove the commerce court from politics and make it what the country wants it to be, a judicial body the selection of which is not made on account of political service or political prominence of its members. The amendment unquestionably strengthens the bill.

The people asked for postal savings banks, the Republican party promised them, and President Taft asked congress for them. Now that we are to have them, let us turn in and give them a fair trial.

AS MEASURE OF ECONOMY

President Taft Wise in Asking Congressional Sanction for Employment of Experts.

The president asked Chairman Tawney to secure the insertion in the sundry civil appropriation bill of an item for the employment of business experts to overhaul the operations of the executive departments. Secretary MacVeagh, upon assuming charge of the treasury, enlisted the aid of several Chicago business experts, who served without compensation, and as a result of their efforts in one section of the department considerable economies were effected. This led the president to believe that the extension of that inquiry might be equally valuable.

There have been other attempts to overhaul the departments, notably the Keep commission, named upon the suggestion of President Roosevelt. That commission, however, consisted of officials and it savored somewhat of the blind attempting to lead the blind, although some good was accomplished. The introduction of business methods by experts uninfluenced by experience in political service may accomplish more. The experiment of the secretary of the treasury suggests that it might be worth while and the economies secured by the postoffice department indicate another probably profitable field for their researches.

Deserves Support of Voters.

Attorney General Wickersham, speaking from his own knowledge of the splendid leadership of President Taft and of the faithful and earnest efforts of the national administration to restrain monopolies and to preserve the people's rights, draws the unavoidable inference that it is the duty of all Republicans to fall in line behind the president and to support him in his conscientious and indefatigable labors. This is the right course not only because it is for the interest of the people, but because the Republican party can in this way alone maintain the standing which has come to "as a national factor from taking t. lead in regulating corporations and in suppressing excesses. This is a case where emphatically in union there is strength, and union should be effected on a practical basis, which is by keeping all the forces of the party together behind the one man who is in a position to accomplish something that is really effective. The Republicans in congress may well take the hint, so that their party control may not be dissipated by the chasing of rainbows.

Tariff Properly Revised.

The nation as a whole is coming to the realization that there has been a revision of the tariff downward. Congressman McCall, quoted by Mr. Sherman, declares it is the greatest cut made at any time since Washington signed the first tariff bill. The advantage on the side of the defenders of the bill is: First they have the facts with regard to its good points; and secondly they admit, as the president admits, that some improvements can yet be made. They are working against the barnstormers, who are weak in two ways. They are not informed on the bill itself, and they are not big enough to admit its good points.

The people are coming to see, also, that the Taft administration has made good in every way. Mr. Sherman's words for the administration will reach a public that has refused to be misled with regard to the man who was raised to the presidency by the force of popular demonstration.

In the course of two speeches at the world's missionary conference William J. Bryan said the world's only yellow peril was the lust for gold.—Edinburg Dispatch in Sun.

Mr. Bryan's own lust for "gold" is only equal to his lust for speech, and he seems insatiable of both.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

HAMILTON NEW "AIR KING"

In these days of startling feats in the air the people are prepared for almost anything. A few days ago Glenn Curtiss boarded his biplane in Albany and in a remarkably short time landed his craft in New York city. He broke some records and amazed thousands with the ease with which he sailed through the air and kept up with a fast train.

Then came Charles Hamilton. This daring aviator got up early one morning stepped into his aerial buggy and enjoyed a little drive over to Philadelphia. Thousands were out to see him start from Governor's island, but more thousands in Quakerdom saw him step nimbly from the aircraft after circling around the aviation field and cutting up several didoes.

After he had delivered a letter from Mayor Gaynor to the mayor of Philadelphia and a letter from Governor Hughes to the governor of Pennsylvania Hamilton enjoyed luncheon in Philadelphia, tightened up a few bolts on his buggy shafts, gave the air horse a drink of gasoline, bowed to the Philadelphians and started on his return to New York city.

The return trip wasn't as easily accomplished as the one going, but after surmounting some unexpected difficulties Mr. Hamilton reached the starting point and accomplished one of the things that has been predicted for airships in the last few years—an inter-city flight.

Hamilton made one of the fast engines on the Pennsylvania railroad that was pulling a pilot train hump to keep up with him and smashed a few more records. This aviator has just recently come into prominence among those who are now engaged in flying the skies, but those who know him say he promises to be a leader in the sport. He has the courage and the necessary nerve and has made a study of the game.

Before autumn has passed there are to be flights between New York and Chicago and St. Louis, for which big prizes have been offered. Hamilton's admirers say they will back him to win the race in which he is entered.

HEEDS CALL OF THE STAGE

Which would you rather do, darn socks, mend your husband's shirts, sew on buttons and attend to the duties of a nice home, or appear on the stage in a great play and hear the applause of hundreds as you scored a big hit?

It is safe to say that nine out of ten women would prefer the stage. Margaret Illington was confident seven months ago that she would like to darn socks. She already was a great actress. She said she didn't like it. She was an Illinois girl, and when she went on the stage used Bloomington, her birthplace, and Illinois in making up the name "Illington." She was married to Daniel Frohman, one of the great men in the theatrical world. They just agreed to disagree and Mrs. Frohman went to Reno, Nev., now more famous because of the Jeffries and Johnson fight, procured a divorce and two minutes and thirty-eight seconds after obtaining the decree was married to Edward J. Bowes, a wealthy real estate dealer.

Mr. Frohman didn't want a wife to darn socks; he wanted a great actress.

With Mr. Bowes the actress thought she would be able to enjoy the home life she craved, and if reports are true Miss Illington would not be returning to the stage but would keep on darning socks. It is the husband who shoulders the blame. He says it was too great a waste of talent for Miss Illington to wield the darning needle.

"Socks, eh!" exclaimed Mr. Bowes. "That's right; she can darn 'em. Nary a hole in these o' mine. And when she goes out on the road I'll go along when I can. She'll have her own private car and can take the socks along. Haw, haw, haw."

Mr. Bowes will spend about $50,000 in launching his wife's new venture. That much cash would pay for darning the holes of a whole lot of socks.

PREDICTS MONEY HEPTARCHY

Thomas Fortune Ryan of Virginia and New York, who has a few dollars stored away for a rainy day himself, has divided what he regards as the present financial monarchy of America, if not of the world, into a heptarchy, which means that the world of money is to be governed by seven kings.

He declared J. Pierpont Morgan to be supreme monarch of the existing money empire, and said that the monarch will have no successor, but that his kingdom will be divided among seven young financiers now in training in New York city.

The men he named to form the heptarchy are J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., and Henry P. Davidson, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Otto H. Kahn and Mortimer L. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; John B. Dennis of Blair & Co. ;George F. Baker, Jr., of the First National bank, and James Stillman, Jr., of the National City bank, all of New York.

Mr. Ryan made this prediction as he was about to sail for Europe, a voyage which he says was not to be taken because he is on the verge of collapse, but for pleasure mixed with business. Some time ago Mr. Ryan withdrew from many of the corporations in which he was interested and since then he says he has slept like a baby and hasn't seen his physician for four months.

Just at present he says he is more interested in the Kongo development than anything else.

"I expect to give a great deal of attention to it," he said. "It is not at all unlikely that I shall make a visit there. The mines in which I am interested are just north of those known as King Solomon's mines. The outlook for gold there is probably unsurpassed anywhere in the world."

PARR GETS A BIG REWARD

How would you like to earn a reward of $100,000? Don't you think it would be a pleasure to you if Uncle Sam would place in your hand ten crisp $10,000 bills and say: "Here, my good and faithful servant, is a reward for a duty well done?" Pretty nice, eh?

This is what will befall Richard Parr, a customs deputy at New York, who assisted the government in recovering $2,000,000 in the sugar underweight frauds. Parr hasn't received the money yet because the fund out of which Uncle Sam pays such rewards wasn't large enough. But he'll get it. President Taft and Secretary Mac Veagh have promised it and that's enough for Parr.

Parr discovered the secret spring on the docks of the American Sugar Refining company, by which the underweighing practise was carried on. The final discoveries of fraud were made in 1907, since which time the government has been engaged in collecting the duties out of which it had been defrauded.

"A hundred thousand dollars is not much money in New York, but I am grateful just the same," said Parr when informed of his good fortune. "I shall invest the bulk of the money in real estate. I have a wife, two sisters, two nieces and two brothers and we shall be glad to own our own home. There will be no extravagance; I have planned that.

"My plans include a vacation in the mountains and then perhaps a trip to Europe. I have been working every day for two years and am on the verge of a nervous breakdown. The vacation is more to me than the money. I shall not give up my present position."

Which shows that Richard Parr is a pretty sensible sort of a man and just the kind of a person who would be able to dig up the evidence necessary to bring a great trust to its knees.

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Holly Springs, Miss.—"Words are inadequate for me to express what your wonderful medicines have done for me. The doctors said I had a tumor, and I had an operation, but was soon as bad again as ever. I wrote to you for advice, and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you told me to do. I am glad to say that now I look and feel so well that my friends keep asking me what has helped me so much, and I gladly recommend your Vegetable Compound."—MRS. WILLIE EDWARDS, Holly Springs, Miss.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give everyone confidence.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Conscienceless Interrupter of Suffragette Meeting Probably a Sadder and Wiser Man.

The suffragette meeting was in full blast. Enthusiasm was rampant and every remark the distinguished leader made was cheered to the echo.

"And now we come to personal courage," cried the speaker, excitedly; "our masculine enemies try to deride us with such allusions as 'frail femininity,' or 'weaker vessels,' but we can show more bravery than men."

"Aye, aye, sister!" echoed a mighty chorus.

"When it comes to real danger we fear nothing."

"Aye, aye, sister!"

"Now, take sister Horn, our worthy fighter and vote getter of this district. She fears nothing. Two nights in succession sister Horn came home from one of our enthusiastic meetings and found a man under her bed."

There was a short pause. Then a little emaciated chap who had crept to the front unobserved arose and stretched his arms.

"H'm!" he ejaculated, with a deep yawn. "I'll bet a dollar agin a plug of tobacco that man was her husband seeking safety."

And when the little emaciated chap finally recovered his bearings he was on the sidewalk minus hat and collar.

Authority on Soup.

A little boy, promoted to company dinner at the family table, enjoyed his oyster cream hugely until he came to an unrecognized object at the bottom of the plate.

"What is it? Oh, just an oyster, dear," responded the child's mother, sharply appealed to.

"Why did Dora put it in?"

"Oh, to make the soup good."

"She can leave it out next time," the tiny epicure decided. "The soup's good enough without."—Exchange.

ASTONISHING POWER of RUNNING WATER

By GEORGE FREDERICK WRIGHT A.M., LL.D.

PART OF THE DELTA OF THE MISSISSIPPI

THE power of running water to remove sand, gravel and pebbles increases in a remarkable degree with the increase in velocity, so that mining engineers can make accurate calculations concerning the velocity which is necessary to remove stones of a certain size from their sluiceways. The transporting power increases 64 times with each doubling of the velocity; so that if you increase the velocity threefold you have increased the transporting power of the water 729 times and if you quadruple it you have increased the weight of the pebble which it would move 4,096 times. This at first thought seems incredible, but it is nevertheless true, and prepares us to appreciate the astonishing results that are produced by running water.

Water moving three feet in a second, or a mile in six hours, will carry along with it particles of fine clay and keep them in suspension. Water moving at twice that velocity will lift and carry along with it fine sand; while a velocity four times as great will sweep along fine gravel and water moving at the rate of two miles an hour will carry along stones as big as a hen's egg. There is hardly any limit to the size of a pebble that would be rolled along by a current of six or eight miles an hour, blocks as big as houses being sometimes set in motion and transported for considerable distances.

In various ways one can obtain positive evidence of this power of water transportation. If, for instance, he attempts to wade across the Platte river in Nebraska, which is overloaded with sand and has a gradient of seven or eight feet to the mile, and hence a very rapid current, he will find his bare legs stung by the particles of sand and fine gravel that are driven against them. Or if after a storm one pauses to listen he will hear what sounds like distant cannonading, produced by the knocking of the stones together as they are rolled along upon the bottom of the stream.

The erosive power of a stream flowing over a rocky bed is determined by its ability to shove along sand and pebbles and gravel over its bottom. It is these particles of solid matter that accomplish the erosion, acting as a rasp, or sandpaper, or more properly a sand blast, to remove the solid rock beneath and deepen the channel of a stream. In order to do this, however, there has to be proper adjustment between the supply of loose solid matter to be transported and the volume and velocity of the water. If there is more sand and gravel than the current can handle, this will accumulate upon the bottom and fill up rather than deepen the bed. If there is too little material the stream will flow over the rocks without effecting much erosion, while if there is just the right amount of solid matter to be shoved along it will deepen the channel with great rapidity.

There are many striking examples of the work which has been accomplished by rivers in deepening and widening their channels. We look upon the rise of mountain chains as being most majestic illustrations of the power of natural forces, but the fact is equally impressive that in many cases rivers which run across the line of mountain elevation are able to wear down their channels as fast as the mountains rise and thus maintain their ancient onward course. The Hudson river has thus sawed down a channel through the solid rocks which in ancient geologic times arose across its course at West Point and below, all that picturesque valley of the Hudson being a valley of erosion. The Delaware river has worn an even more striking gorge through the Blue Ridge at the Delaware Water Gap, where it cuts directly across the very hard strata of Medina sandstone constituting Blue Ridge, forming perpendicular walls on either side 1,000 feet in height. Similar gorges are found in the Susquehanna and Potomac and many other rivers along the Appalachian chain just above where they emerge upon the surrounding lowland. We often speak of such rivers as "bursting" through their barrier. But there was no bursting in the operation. These gorges were cut by the slow process which we have described, the rivers lowering their channels gradually as the mountains slowly rose across them.

Among the most striking examples of rivers which have by erosion kept pace with the elevation of mountains across their course is that of the Columbia river, in Oregon, where for a long distance it occupies a trough running directly through the mountain chain thousands of feet in depth. Another very striking instance is that to be seen in the Amur river where it crosses the Bureya mountains in eastern Siberia. For nearly 100 miles the stream crosses this range with a gradient that is continuous with that of the vast prairie regions above and below. The Yenisei river has cut a similar gorge across the granite mountain chain which rose up to separate the fertile plains of Minusinsk from the vaster plains of northern Siberia.

Coming to our own country, we have in addition to the streams already mentioned, gorges and canons on a most impressive scale in the upper part of the Susquehanna river, where the east branch cuts across the Allegheny mountains south of the state of New York, and forms the beautiful Wyoming valley, which is wholly one of erosion. The west branch has likewise cut a gorge of equal dimensions 50 miles or more in length west of Williamsport, which is fully 1,000 feet in depth, as one can see by the fact that here the coal mines on either side are that distance above the bed of the stream and of the railroad track. Coming to the other side of the Allegheny mountains, one strikes into the various branches of the Ohio river and finds himself in a trench several hundred feet below the general level of the land, and extending for more than 1,000 miles in length until the river emerges into the center of the Mississippi valley. The upper part of the Mississippi occupies a similar gorge for a still greater distance. Everywhere along this portion of their course on ascending either side of the rivers to the summit, one will find himself upon a vast plain, extending off in either direction, whose main superficial irregularities are those which have been produced by the erosion of the countless smaller streams which joined together make the great rivers.

Matchmaking of Japanese

Mr. Orio Tamura, as we will call our young gentleman, is about twenty years old, an article in the Wide World says. He is an up-to-date Japanese, and has put off all thoughts of matrimony until this comparatively late date—for Japan—in order to finish his university studies. Now, however, he has finished his training, and has intimated to his father, as a dutiful son should, that he would like to marry. That is all he is required to do, at present; it is the business of his parents to take the next step.

Orio's father, presumably, has some quiet talks with his wife on the subject, and then betakes himself to a professional matchmaker, or go-between. These marriage brokers are a class apart—discreet men of the world, with a good deal of insight into human nature. For the sake of his own reputation and future the go-between usually does his best to please all parties.

Sometimes, in the east as in the west, love laughs at restraints, and somebody or other conveys a hint to the marriage broker that a meeting between Mr. A—— and Miss Z—— might not be unacceptable to both; in which case the task is easy. Usually, however, he takes time to look around him, and he in turn—how indispensable the ladies are in these matters—consults his wife. At last, carefully considering the official and social position of the persons and families interested, he suggests that a certain Miss Chrysanthemum would make a most desirable bride for the "learned son of the honorable house of Tamura."

Once more Orio's father consults his wife and sundry other relations, and, having no fault to find with the go-between's suggestion, instructs the latter to proceed. The marriage broker's next step is to approach the parents of the young lady he has in view and arrange a formal appointment for mutual inspection—it is known as the "look-at-each-other meeting"—between the prospective bride and bridegroom at the house of the bride's father, and in the presence of that gentleman and the go-between himself.

The meeting usually takes the form of a conventional tea party, at which the prospective bride does the honors. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that she does not wear the oldest clothes on this occasion. Here, for the first time in their lives, the young lady and Orio set eyes on each other. Etiquette forbids them to speak to each other, but nevertheless they are doubtless very busy taking "stock" of the other's appearance and manners.

Fate of a Merchant of Fez

The merchants of Fez are to be found all over Morocco. In due course Ali Mahmoud launches out into business on a large scale, says the London Graphic. He prospers exceedingly and presently purchases a black female slave to assist his wife in her duties. Ali Mahmoud takes a house in the pleasant olive groves. In course of time he buys two more slaves and is fairly set up as a householder.

When his first daughter is born there is great rejoicing. The baby is immediately stained all over its little body with henna and then smeared liberally with butter and wrapped in woolen clothes. On the seventh day these are removed and the child is washed for the first time. When the girl has reached her first year her head is shaved, leaving a little tuft by which Mohammed could catch her up to heaven if he were so disposed. In her seventh year her hair has grown long again. She is then veiled, and her proud father sets about looking for a husband for her. It is still the custom to betroth children from infancy.

Ali Mahmoud prospers, and, save for a few domestic troubles, his life runs smoothly. In the evenings Ali will sit and smoke in the bosom of his family. On Thursdays and Saturdays he visits his friends. They pass the time in simple games of cards or in listening to the weird efforts of itinerant musicians. Our merchant gets stout as he approaches middle age. One day his world tumbles about him. Such is the uncertainty of fate in Morocco.

He was serving in his shop when the customer suddenly raised his voice and cried out that he was getting false weight. The accusation was terrible, and Ali vehemently protested his innocence. It was an arranged charge by an enemy of the merchant, who philosophically bowed his head with this saying: "Kismet! Mine enemy has found me, and the serpent requires milk." The arbitrators were called, and, having been bribed previously, they find Mahmoud guilty and sentence him to the usual punishment meted out to givers of false weights. He is dragged to the southern wall of the city, to a place where a tall gibbet is erected. By the irony of fate it is within sight of his own house. A rope is made fast to his right wrist and hoisted up until his toes can just touch the ground. Here he is left till sunset. The idlers jeer at him and the gamins of the quarter pelt him with stones and refuse. At sundown his friends carry him home. Broken and disgraced, thus ended his career as a respectable merchant.

LOST IN NEW YORK

Thousands of Disappearances Reported to Police Annually.

Esther Maude Mearson's Case Resembles in Many Respects That of Ruth Wheeler Who Was Murdered.

New York.—Exhaustive search by the police in every nook and corner of New York failed to reveal the slightest trace of Esther Maude Mearson, aged sixteen, who mysteriously disappeared after starting out to seek work as a stenographer.

The case resembles in many respects that of Ruth Wheeler, who also sought employment as a stenographer and went to the rooms of Albert Wolter, where she was murdered and her body burned and put into a sack. It is another of the many strange disappearances of a great city's daily life.

In fact, the parents of Esther Mearson, having in mind the sad fate of Ruth when their own daughter went in search of employment, cautioned her against going to private residences for work or answering post card requests for help as did Ruth Wheeler, Esther, an unusually attractive girl, well proportioned and large for her age, was also warned to be careful of her conduct while in the presence of strange men.

It was Lyon Mearson, brother of the missing girl, who first notified the police of her disappearance. Lyon, a graduate of the New York law school, is employed in the office of a large law firm. Joseph Mearson, the girl's father, is a retired jewelry and dry goods salesman. There are seven children in the family. They live at 107 East One Hundred and Twenty-third street.

Esther left school two years ago and became a pupil in the Hebrew Technical institute, where she took a special course. Upon leaving the institute she took up the study of stenography at her home and before long became proficient in it. While it was not necessary for her to seek employment, the girl did not wish to be idle.

Mrs. Mearson was the only member of the family to talk with Esther Monday morning, when the girl was preparing to continue her quest of a position. The girl was more confident than ever she would find a place where there would be a chance of advancement. She told her mother that was the kind of a position she was trying for.

"I will be home as soon as I can, mother," said Esther, as she kissed her parent goodby. "I will be glad if I find the place I am looking for because I need something to occupy my mind."

A woman describing herself as Mrs. J. F. Kennedy went to see Mrs. Mearson and told her that she was pretty sure that she had seen Esther on Third avenue near One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth street. Mrs. Kennedy said she saw a middle-aged man in the neighborhood of fifty, say, accost the girl, calling her "miss." The girl, Mrs. Kennedy says, stopped and the two were still talking when Mrs. Kennedy went on about her own affairs.

Thousands of such cases come to the notice of the Gotham police every year. Some of the disappearing persons return after they have been away a short time and the public hears nothing more of them. Others never are found and go down in the annals of the police department as unexplained mysteries.

When Father Helped.

The fond father held the manuscript while his son practised the oration.

"Shall we permit the ruthless hand of the hydra-headed tyrant," cried the youth, "to—to—to—well, what is it?"

The father was wrestling with the manuscript.

"Oh, yes," he muttered, "here it is: 'to dessicate.' Go on."

"It's desecrate," cried the boy, indignantly. "'Shall we permit the ruthless hand of the hydra-headed tyrant to desecrate the—the—the—' why don't you prompt me?"

The father was staring hard at the manuscript.

"The—the poodle—paddle—poodleum of our liver ties," he stammered.

"It's the 'palladium of our liberties,'" roared the boy. "Gimme that paper—I'll say it meself."

And he stalked away angrily.

But He Wasn't.

Senator Depew, in his Washington residence on his seventy-sixth birthday, told a reporter that his health was perfect.

"You do, indeed, sir," said the reporter, heartily, "look the picture of health."

"Yes," said the senator, "I shouldn't have said I was well if my appearance didn't bear me out. A self-contradictory statement is merely ludicrous. You have heard about the census taker?

"A census taker rang the bell of a Hillyer place residence the other day and an elderly gentleman opened the door.

"'I'd like to see the head of the house,' said the census taker.

"'S-sh! Not so loud!' whispered the elderly gentleman. 'Now, what is it? I'm the head of the house?'"

Get After the Flies.

With the warm days flies multiply amazingly. Now is the time to attack them and prevent the breeding of millions from the few hundreds that already exist.

Perhaps the most effective method of destroying flies is by burning pyrethrum in each room. This stuns the flies and they can be swept up and burned.

Flies are dangerous carriers of disease and an enemy of humankind. Do your part toward keeping down the pest and improving the health of your community.

WOMAN'S ADVANCE IN CHINA

One of the Most Encouraging Signs of Progress That the Great Empire Has Yet Given.

When Christ begins to uplift a race, the evidence of it is seen in the position and education of woman. In the great land of China woman is still ignorant and enslaved to man. Mentally, morally and physically she is still near the bottom of the ladder—but a change is coming and has, in fact already become evident. A new style of woman is appearing, with unbound feet, with face washed from the old-time paint and powder, with the impulse and admitted right to take her place beside the men of her family and acquaintance in social and intellectual life.

Perhaps the most evident change has been in the line of woman's education. Thirty years ago there was not even the simplest classic for them; now the road to highest education is opening. The very men who a generation ago wished to keep them in subjection now demand they shall be like their western sisters.

"A cry comes from all over China for teachers, for women who know," says a writer in Woman's Work. "This need offers perhaps the greatest opportunity for American young women that exists anywhere for the Chinese are willing to pay for English, for music, for anything. It is decreed that their women must be enlightened."

Another sign of progress in China is seen in the new official Chinese almanac, which contains for the first time in its history the Christian Sunday as well as the Chinese holy days.

German Alcohol Stills.

An authority on alcohol stills says that there are 20,000 farm stills in operation on as many farms in Germany. The German government permits the farmer to produce a certain amount of grain or potato alcohol, the amount depending upon the size and location of the farm and the annual demand for the product, upon the payment of a reduced revenue tax. Alcohol distilled in excess of the quantity allowed is subject to the higher rate of taxation. Denatured alcohol, however, is not subject to any tax.

REPUBLICANS WILL WIN EASILY

SENATOR PENROSE DECLARES

Taft Administartion Has Kept Its Pledges to the People.

United States Senator Boies Penrose says that the Republicans will sweep Pennsylvania this fall, electing not only the State ticket but retaining the present strength in Congress. In an interview given at Atlantic City to a representative of the Philadalphia Press the Senator spoke emphatically on the situation. He called attention to the splendid administration of Governor Edwin S. Stuart and gave his reasons for forecasting Republican victory.

The Senator said:

"If my advice is followed the same open, square, manly fight that is to be made in Pennsylvania for the President will be made in every Congressional district in the Union. I tell you the people are with Taft. They are beginning to appreciate his breadth, his sanity, his usefulness. The days of the obstructionist are nearly ended. I am afraid that Senator Beverage will lose his seat in Indiana as one effect of his opposition to the President. Others who have adopted similar tactics are likely to meet a similar fate.

"Returning to Pennsylvania, I predict that John K. Tener will prove to be a powerful candidate and an admirable Governor. He has breadth of view and strength of character, a kindly nature and great executive ability. He has ideas that are noteworthy, and his Republicanism is of the old-fashioned rock-ribbed variety. He will tour the State, and I predict that he will not back away from any discussion of the Taft Administration nor of the administration of State affairs given by the Republican party under Governor Stuart.

"I don't care to talk of the Third party movement until it shall crystalize into something more than talk. When I return from my Western trip in September, I may have something to say about it, about the men who compose it and their motives."

"What about the alleged movement to defeat Representatives who voted with Speaker Cannon?"

"Nothing will come of it. They voted right, and their action needs no defense. When the American public understands, as it will understand some day, the outrageous persecution to which that great old Republican has been subjected by splenetic muckrakers, it will take its revenge on the conspirators.

"I want the people of Pennsylvania to scrutinize the records of the Taft Administration in the nation and the Stuart Administration in the State. I want them to study the new tariff and to make their own observations and to form their own opinions concerning conditions in the nation and in Pennsylvania. If this shall be done, I have no fear of the result.

"Pessimism is a contageous disease. Prosperity is its antidote.—All signs point to the effective check of the malady. There has been so much misrepresentation that, naturally, many believed the false prophets. The approaching campaign will give an opportunity to show up the detractors in in their true colors. This will be done in a fair discussion of everything for which the Republican party stands, and I anticipate that Pennsylvania will lead the country in just that kind of discussion."

FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL.
REV. J. F. ANDERSON, Pastor.

Subject of Sermon at 10:30 A. M. "Fitness for the Kingdom," Evening subject: "Spiritual Arom." All the other regular services of the day will be observed.

FOUR REASONS WHY THE JEFFRIES-JOHNSON PRIZE FIGHT MOVING PICTURES SHOULD NOT BE PUT ON EXHIBITION IN EMPORIUM.

1.—Because such pictures would be exhibitions of brutality and crime, appealing only and directly to the depraved and beastly in human nature.

2.—Because such exhibitions of brutality and crime could not be otherwise than harmful, mentally and morally, to the minds of children and young people—a class of persons who would probably not be barred from attendance thereat.

3.—Because of the danger attending such exhibitions of stirring up race feeling, a thing that should not be encouraged but discouraged and carefully guarded against.

4.—Because prize fighting in this State is illegal, and hence such exhibitions of prize-fighting could only be construed as a violation of the prize-fighting law, subjecting the violators thereto to the penalties attached thereto.

For these, and other reasons which could be named, such exhibitions should be prohibited in Emporium, both by public sentiment and by legal authority.

JOSEPH F. ANDERSON, Pastor
First Methodist Episcopal Church.

Special Low Rates.

During the free exhibit and demonstration of the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton this week in the Fetter Building, Fourth street, Emporium, they are organizing a special club of students and giving a very large discount from the regular prices of their courses. Free catalogues on any of the 220 different courses of instruction will be gladly given by calling at the exhibit.

W. C. T. U. Notice.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold their regular business meeting Saturday, July 23, at eight o'clock, at the home of Mrs. F. P. Schriner on Fifth street. All members are requested to be present as business of importance is to be transacted.

GRACE F. HEIDECK, Sec'y.

Base Ball Practice.

Every one who ever did play ball, or hopes to in the future, are urgently requested to come out. Let us get together and see if "The Office Men" cannot give "The Regulars" a run for honorary mention. A scrub game called at six-thirty each evening. Everybody come out for clean recreation, and the best to win a suit.

Lady Press Agent With Robbins Shows.

Mrs. Charles A. Chapman, advance press agent for the Frank A. Robbins circus, which appears in this city May 28, was a pleasant caller at The Daily News office this afternoon. Mrs. Chapman is the only lady press agent ahead of any circus in the world and is capable in every respect. Her husband, Charles A Chapman, is manager of advertising car, No. 1 which is doing service here to-day.—Shamokin Daily News.

Will exhibit in Emporium, Tuesday, Aug. 2nd.

It's Your Kidneys.

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. An Emporium Citizen Shows How to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness, when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Emporium people testify to permanent cures.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents, Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Eight Months for $5.00

Any person who cannot get their strength back in the four months which constitute a $5 treatment of Sexine Pills is entitled to the free treatment of four months more. Sexine Pills are absolutely guaranteed for all forms of nerve weakness in men or women. Address or call on R. C. Dodson, Druggist, Emporium, Pa., where they sell all the principal remedies and do not substitute.

Must be Above Suspicion.

Kidney and bladder ailments are so serious in their consequence, and if unchecked so often fatal that any remedy offered for their cure must be above suspicion. Foley's Kidney Pills contain no harmful drugs, and have successfully stood a long and thorough test. For sale by the Emporium Drug Co.

Foley's Kidney Pills have Cured Me.

The above is a quotation from a letter written by H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind., "I contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. I seemed to have lost all strength and ambition; was bothered with dizzy spells, my head would swim and specks would float before my eyes. I took Foley's Kidney Pills regularly and am now perfectly well and feel like a new man. Foley Kidney Pills cured me." For sale by Emporium Drug Co.

Council Proceedings.

Moved by Mr. Howard, seconded by Mr. Mullin, that in consequence of the large expense necessarily iucurred in rebuilding the furnace plant so as to make it a continuing and permanent industry the term of exemption from Borough taxes be extended for one year and that the Borough, sewer, extension and paving bond taxes assessed against the Sinnamahoning Iron and Coal Company for the year 1910 are hereby remitted and exonerated.

Ayes and Nayes were called. Ayes: Messrs. Haupt, Howard, Mullin, Mumford, Norris and Foster. Nayes—None. Council then adjourned.

C. E. CRANDELL,
Secretary.

The Delineator for August.

The Delineator's August number contains a great deal about beautiful women. In the new editorial department, "Conversazione," which has quickly gained an immense audience, Erman J. Ridgway mingles grave and gay philosophy so deftly that all who read must stop to think, even while they smile. When he talks of the prettiest woman he ever saw Mr. Ridgway recalls youthful memories that establish a universal kinship and then he reveals a new significance in every-day things.

"Getting Pretty Quick," by Gelett Burgess, is an extraordinary article, which deals with a beauty quite different from that considered editorially by Mr. Ridgway. The writer gives an account of the sufferings endured by a foolish woman willing to be actually skinned alive in order that she might appear young. William E. Borah, United States Senator for Idaho, tells "Why I Am for Suffrage for Women," J. Horace McFarland describes the work of civic improvement in Harrisburg, Pa., and Adachi Kinnoskue offers reasons "Why Japanese Women Make the Best Wives."

The fiction of the month includes "A Priest In Spite of Himself," by Rudyard Kipling, "The Young Man With Wings," by Mary Redmond Shipman Andrews; "Fresh Air for Grandpa," by Louise Closser Hale," and Mary Stewart Cutting's serial, "The Unforseen,"

THE MAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE appears for the second time in the Delineator and it is a distinct humorous success. No more unique idea than this has ever been exploited by a periodical. Everyone will laugh at the drawing "If Apollo Came to Atlantic City," by Albert Levering and at the following illuminating contributions: "How to be Handsome," by Charles Battell Loomis; "Ode to a Dish-Pan," by Oscar Llewellyn. "Good Games for Men," by James L. Ford; "The Legal Liabilities of the Best Man," by H. L. Menchen and "The Man Who Makes His Own Clothes," by Gelett Burgess.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Nye and children, who went to Lebanon on Sunday last to visit relatives will not return until 30th.

J. M. Davison, of this place, is an expert bookkeeper. He is now filling the position for Crescent Tannery at Driftwood.

J. E. Johnson, of Huntley, was a PRESS caller last Friday and pushed the date on his paper well into 1911. Call again, Jess.

Miss Jennie Robinson returned home on Monday, after visiting friends and relatives in Watsontown and Williamsport for several weeks.

Mrs. Jas. J. Welsh has returned from Buffalo, being called there on account of the very serious illness of Mrs. Jno. Powell, nee Nellie Ryan.

John Heber and Asa Murray clerks under Agent Thos. Gallagher, are both taking a short vacation--the former visiting at Elmira, while the latter is taking in the sights at Pittsburg.

Chas. Pappazoni, Supt. of Jefferson Powder Co., Birmingham, Ala., visited friends in Emporium over Sunday. Of course he called on the PRESS.

Mrs. W. T. Murphy, of DuBois, is guest of her daughter, Mrs. Catharine Bush, one of the obliging telephone ladies at this place.

Miss Nellie Miller, of Port Allegany, who with a party of school friends have been enjoying the sights of the Historic Hudson, spent the first of the week with her aunt, Mrs. Gordon Baker and family.

Mrs. DeHass and son, Master Heine, who were guests of the former's sister, Mrs. M. T. Bisel, at the residence of Hon. Josiah Howard, returned to Norristown this morning.

Miss Jane Evans has returned from a delightfnl visit with her sister, Mrs. Cruise and daughter, at Buffalo. She also made a visit for a few days at Crystal Beach.

Arthur Catlin, one of First National Bank clerks, is on a ten day vacation, visiting at Jamestown and other points. He is accompanied by his mother.

Edward Colemen, of Olean, N. Y., son of of our late respected citizen, E. G. Coleman, transacted business in Emporium this week, looking after his property interest here. The young man was a social caller at the PRESS office on Tuesday. He resembles his father more and more as he grows to manhood.

Miss Josephene Gilbert, who visited her father, Mr. C. L. Gilbert, at this place, left on Monday for Nunda, N. Y., from there to Rochester, where she will visit her brother W. G. Gilbert and wife, after which she goes to the Adirondack mountains to complete her vacation before going back to her work at Buffalo. Miss Gilbert is a very fine lady and made many friends here.

Miss Encie Howard returned on Monday from Batavia N. Y., where she attended the wedding of a friend. While at Batavia, we understand she executed some fine stunts with her auto, only meeting with one small mishap, when she bumped off the road a load of hay.

Miss Grace Hill, nurse in Episcopal Hospital, Philadelphia, is visiting in Emporium, guest of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Strayer. Miss Hill has frequently visited at this place and is delighted with our beautiful scenery and climate.

Another Emporium Boy Makes Good.

Three auditors completed their work last Saturday of auditing accounts at the Pennsylvania freight house and station found everything in tip-top shape. A difference of one cent was found in the account and this was accounted for. Mr. Moore who is a competent man for a position of this kind and is well liked by everyone who deals with him.—St. Mary's Press.

Narrow Escape.

Last Saturday evening whilst John Hammer was returning from his duties at Keystone plant, his horse took fright at an auto, just as he was going over the hill, between town and Plank Road. John jumped and horse and buggy went over a steep embankment. Luckily the horse escaped injury.

The first reunion and basket pic-nic of the descendants of Joseph and Hannah (Youngs) Hinds will be held at Renwick Park, Ithaca, on Saturday, July 30, 1910. All descendants of James Y. and Charlotte Hinds, William H and Ruth A. Pifer, Ira and Esther S. Angle, Silas and Diadama Hinds, Solomon and Ellen T. Hinds, Elijah aud Elizabeth P. Rant, Lot S. and Catharine M. Hinds, and Charles W. and Margaret P. Hinds are requested to be present. Remember the date—Saturday, July 30, 1910.

Delightful Trip.

Our honored townsman, Mr. H. C. Olmsted and daughter Miss Myrtle, returned on Saturday from a delightful six weeks' trip up the lakes to Washburn, Wis., where they enjoyed the time of their lives guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Beers. Mr. Beers is Supt. of the DuPont powder plant at Barksdale, Wis. Mr Olmsted's description of the ride on the lakes from Buffalo is very interesting and made us "hanker" for the trip, but we guess we shall have to forego the pleasure this year. It must be a grand trip.

Clean Attractions.

The Theatorium continues to serve the public first-class, clean attractions every evening and every convenience has been applied to make its patrons comfortable. Parents will do well to see that their children patronize only reliable entertainments, where no harm can come to them. Better, still go with your entire family and enjoy the fine entertainments and view the beautiful as well as instructive pictures.

Delightful Visit.

Mrs. Jos. Kaye, accompanied by her daughter Miss Sara, returned last Friday from visiting relatives at Ferndale, N. Y., and while there went to Monticelli, N. Y., where they had the pleasure of meeting Rev. Mr. Robertson, former Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, this place. They found our former Rector enjoying his vacation very much. While en route for home they stopped at Williamsport, were they were joined by Miss Jessie Lord, a niece, and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Lord, of Westboro, Wis., who accompanied them home for a short visit, at the palatial home of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Kaye, Sixth street.

'Twas Circus Day.

Frank Robbins circus visited Olean yesterday, and gave clean, attractive and entertaining performances afternoon and evening. The Robbins show is one of the good old kind, where you can see all that is "doing," and while there are not one hundred and one "turns" as in the big three ring circuses, what there is is good. The tents were well filled, both in the afternoon and evening, and those present seemed satisfied that they had received their money's worth. The show people claim no following of "sharks" and gamblers, and no complaints along that line were made during their visit in Olean. The Robbins shows can be credited with fulfilling all that they promise.—Olean Times.

Will exhibit in Emporium, Tuesday, Aug. 2nd.

Destroying Potato Beetles.

A request for particulars as to using Paris green in "shorts" for destroying potato beetles, came from Adams County to State Zoologist H. A. Surface, who sent the following reply:

"Replying to your letter asking how much Paris green to use in a bushel of shorts to destroy Potato Beetles, I beg to say that your inquiry presupposed a formula which I have not tried, and, consequently do not recommend. It is not necessary to use shorts with Paris green for this pest. If you are going to apply the poison in the dust form, I should mix the Paris Green with a much cheaper material than shorts. Leached ashes, air-slaked lime, or even finely divided road dust would be good to mix with the Paris green, mixing one part of the poison with about fifty parts of the dust, to be applied over the plants when the leaves are damp with dew or recently fallen rain, but the application should be uniform, and it will not then give as satisfactory results, nor be as easy of application as spraying with an arsenical poison of water.

"What I recommend for the Potato beetle is, either one-half pound of Paris green, or two or three pounds of arsenate of lead, in fifty gallons of Bordeaux mixture. The arsenate of lead is the best mixture that can be used, because it is more poisonous to the pests, less injurious to the plants, remains better in suspension in the spray liquid, so that it makes a more uniform application, and sticks longer on the plants. One spraying with arsenate of lead will easily take the place of two or three sprayings of Paris green, in point of duration or endurance, while one spraying of Paris green will take the place of from four to six dust applications, if it should be rainy and the material is thus carried away.

"It is not necessary to use the poison with Bordeaux mixture for the beetles alone, as its use in water would be sufficient for killing these pests; but while you are at the operation, it is as easy to apply the combined fungicide and insecticide, and thus be able to prevent plant diseases as well as kill insects."

CHAPTER I.

I Take a Country House.

This is the story of how a middle-aged spinster lost her mind, deserted her domestic gods in the city, took a furnished house for the summer out of town, and found herself involved in one of those mysterious crimes that keep our newspapers and detective agencies happy and prosperous. For 20 years I had been perfectly comfortable; for 20 years I had had the window-boxes filled in the spring, the carpets lifted, the awnings put up and the furniture covered with brown linen; for as many summers I had said good-by to my friends, and, after watching their perspiring hegira, had settled down to a delicious quiet in town, where the mail comes three times a day, and the water supply does not depend on a tank on the roof.

And then—the madness seized me. When I look back over the months I spent in Sunnyside, I wonder that I survived at all. As it is, I show the wear and tear of my harrowing experiences. I have turned very gray—Liddy reminded me of it only yesterday by saying that a little bluing in the rinse water would make my hair silvery instead of a yellow white. I hate to be reminded of unpleasant things and I snapped her off.

"No," I said sharply, "I'm not going to use bluing at my time of life, or starch, either."

Liddy's nerves are gone, she says, since that awful summer, but she has enough left, goodness knows! And when she begins to go around with a lump in her throat, all I have to do is to threaten to return to Sunnyside, and she is frightened into a semblance of cheerfulness—from which you may judge that the summer there was anything but a success.

The newspaper accounts have been so garbled and incomplete—one of them mentioned me but once, and then only as the tenant at the time the thing happened—that I feel it my due to tell what I know. Mr. Jamieson, the detective, said himself he could never have done without me, although he gave me little enough credit, in print.

I shall have to go back several years—13, to be exact—to start my story. At that time my brother died, leaving me his two children. Halsey was 11 then and Gertrude was seven. When Halsey had finished his electrical course and Gertrude her boarding school both came home to stay. The winter Gertrude came out was nothing but a succession of sitting up late at night to bring her home from things, taking her to the dressmakers between naps the next day, and discouraging ineligible youths with either more money than brains or more brains than money. By spring I was quite tractable. So when Halsey suggested camping in the Adirondacks and Gertrude wanted Bar Harbor, we compromised on a good country house with links near, within motor distance of the doctor. That was how we went to Sunnyside.

We went out to inspect the property, and it seemed to deserve its name. Its cheerful appearance gave no indication whatever of anything out of the ordinary. Only one thing seemed unusual to me: The housekeeper, who had been left in charge, had moved from the house to the gardener's lodge a few days before. As the lodge was far enough away from the house, it seemed to me that either fire or thieves could complete their work of destruction undisturbed. The property was an extensive one; the house on the top of a hill, which sloped away in great stretches of green lawn and clipped hedges, to the road, and across the valley, perhaps a couple of miles away, was the Greenwood Club house. Gertrude and Halsey were infatuated.

The property was owned by Paul Armstrong, the president of the Traders' bank, who at the time we took the house was in the west with his wife and daughter, and a Dr. Walker, the Armstrong family physician. Halsey knew Louise Armstrong—had been rather attentive to her the winter before, but as Halsey was always attentive to somebody, I had not thought of it seriously, although she was a charming girl. I knew of Mr. Armstrong only through his connection with the bank, where the children's money was largely invested, and through an ugly story about the son, Arnold Armstrong, who was reported to have forged his father's name for a considerable amount to some bank paper. However, the story had had no interest for me.

I cleared Halsey and Gertrude away to a house party, and moved out to Sunnyside the first of May.

The first night passed quietly enough. I have always been grateful for that one night's peace; it shows what the country might be under favorable circumstances. Never after that night did I put my head on my pillow with any assurance how long it would be there; or on my shoulders, for that matter.

On the following morning Liddy and Mrs. Ralston, my own housekeeper, had a difference of opinion, and Mrs. Ralston left on the 11 train. Just after luncheon, Burke, the butler, was taken unexpectedly with a pain in his right side, much worse when I was within hearing distance, and by afternoon he was started cityward. That night the cook's sister had a baby—the cook, seeing indecision in my face, made it twins on second thought—and, to be short, by noon the next day the household staff was down to Liddy and myself. And this in a house with 22 rooms and five baths!

Liddy wanted to go back to the city at once, but the milkboy said that Thomas Johnson, the Armstrongs' colored butler, was working as a waiter at the Greenwood club and might come back. I have the usual scruples about coercing people's servants away, but few of us have any conscience regarding institutions or corporations—witness the way we beat railroads and street car companies when we can—so I called up the club, and about eight o'clock Thomas Johnson came to see me. Poor Thomas!

Well, it ended by my engaging Thomas on the spot, at outrageous wages, and with permission to sleep in the gardener's lodge, empty since the house was rented. The old man—he was white-haired and a little stooped, but with an immense idea of his personal dignity—gave me his reasons hesitatingly.

"I ain't sayin' nothing', Mis' Innes," he said, his hand on the door-knob, "but there's been goin's-on here this las' few months as ain't natchal. 'Tain't one thing an' 'taint another—it's jest a door squealin' here, an' a winder closing' there, but when doors an' winders gets to cuttin' up capers and there's nobody nigh 'em, it's time Thomas Johnson sleeps somewhar's else."

That Completed Our Demoralization.

Liddy, who seemed to be never more than ten feet away from me that night, and was afraid of her shadow in that great barn of a place, screamed a little, and turned a yellow-green. But I am not easily alarmed.

It was entirely in vain I represented to Thomas that we were alone, and that he would have to stay in the house that night. He was politely firm, but he would come over early the next morning, and if I gave him a key, he would come in time to get some sort of breakfast. I stood on the huge veranda and watched him shuffle along down the shadowy drive with mingled feelings—irritation at his cowardice and thankfulness at getting him at all. I am not ashamed to say that I double-locked the hall door when I went in.

"You can lock up the rest of the house and go to bed, Liddy," I said severely. "You give me the creeps standing there. A woman of your age ought to have better sense." It usually braces Liddy to mention her age; she owns to 40—which is absurd. Her mother cooked for my grandfather, and Liddy must be at least as old as I. But that night she refused to brace.

"You're not going to ask me to lock up, Miss Rachel!" she quavered. "Why, there's a dozen French windows in the drawing room and the billiard room wing, and every one opens on a porch. And Mary Anne said that last night there was a man standing by the stable when she locked the kitchen door."

"Mary Anne was a fool," I said sternly. "If there had been a man there she would have had him in the kitchen and been feeding him what was left from dinner, inside of an hour, from force of habit. Now don't be ridiculous. Lock up the house and go to bed. I am going to read."

But Liddy set her lips tight and stood still.

"I'm not going to bed," she said. "I am going to pack up, and to-morrow I am going to leave."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," I snapped. Liddy and I often desire to part company, but never at the same time. "If you are afraid, I will go with you, but for goodness' sake don't try to hide behind me."

The house was a typical summer residence on an extensive scale. Wherever possible, on the first floor, the architect had done away with partitions, using arches and columns instead. The effect was cool and spacious, but scarcely cozy. As Liddy and I went from one window to another, our voices echoed back at us uncomfortably. There was plenty of light—the electric plant down in the village supplied us—but there were long vistas of polished floor, and mirrors which reflected us from unexpected corners, until I felt some of Liddy's foolishness communicate itself to me.

The house was very long, a rectangle in general form, with the main entrance in the center of the long side. The brick-paved entry opened into a short hall, to the right of which, separated only by a row of pillars, was a huge living room. Beyond that was the drawing room, and in the end the billiard room. Off the billiard room, in the extreme right wing, was a den, or cardroom, with a small hall opening on the east veranda, and from there went up a narrow circular staircase.

Liddy and I got as far as the cardroom and turned on all the lights. I tried the small entry door there, which opened on the veranda, and examined the windows. Everything was secure, and Liddy, a little less nervous now, had just pointed out to me the disgraceful dusty condition of the hard-wood floor, when suddenly the lights went out. We waited a moment; I think Liddy was stunned with fright or she would have screamed. And then I clutched her by the arm and pointed to one of the windows opening on the porch. The sudden change threw the window into relief, an oblong of grayish light, and showed us a figure standing close, peering in. As I looked it darted across the veranda and out of sight in the darkness.

CHAPTER II.

A Link Cuff-Button.

Liddy's knees seemed to give away under her. Without a sound she sank down, leaving me staring at the window in petrified amazement. Liddy began to moan under her breath, and in my excitement I reached down and shook her.

"Stop it," I whispered. "It's only a woman—maybe a maid of the Armstrongs'. Get up and help me find the door." She groaned again. "Very well," I said, "then I'll have to leave you here. I'm going."

She moved at that, and, holding to my sleeve, we felt our way, with numerous collisions, to the billiard-room, and from there to the drawing-room. The lights came on then, and, with the long French windows unshuttered, I had a creepy feeling that each one sheltered a peering face. In fact, in the light of what happened afterward, I am pretty certain we were under surveillance during the entire ghostly evening. We hurried over the rest of the locking-up and got upstairs as quickly as we could. I left the lights all on, and our footsteps echoed cavernously. Liddy had a stiff neck the next morning, from looking back over her shoulder, and she refused to go to bed.

"Let me stay in your dressing room, Miss Rachel," she begged. "If you don't I'll sit in the hall outside the door. I'm not going to be murdered with my eyes shut."

It was 11 o'clock when I finally prepared for bed. In spite of my assumption of indifference, I locked the door into the hall, and finding the transom did not catch, I put a chair cautiously before the door—it was not necessary to rouse Liddy—and climbing up put on the ledge of the transom a small dressing-mirror, so that any movement of the frame would send it crashing down. Then, secure in my precautions I went to bed.

I did not go to sleep at once. Liddy disturbed me just as I was growing drowsy, by coming in and peering under the bed. She was afraid to speak, however, because of her previous snubbing, and went back, stopping in the doorway to sigh dismally.

Somewhere down-stairs a clock with a chime sang away the hours—eleven-thirty, forty-five, twelve. And then the lights went out to stay. The Casanova Electric Company shuts up shop and goes home to bed at midnight: when one has a party, I believe it is customary to fee the company, which will drink hot coffee and keep awake a couple of hours longer. But the lights were gone for good that night. Liddy had gone to sleep, as I knew she would. She was a very unreliable person: always awake and ready to talk when she wasn't wanted and dozing off to sleep when she was I called her once or twice, the only result being an explosive snore that threatened her very windpipe—then I got up and lighted a bedroom candle.

My bedroom and dressing room were above the big living room on the first floor. On the second floor a long corridor ran the length of the house, with rooms opening from both sides. In the wings were small corridors crossing the main one—the plan was simplicity itself. And just as I got back into bed, I heard a sound from the east wing, apparently, that made me stop, frozen, with one bedroom slipper half off, and listen. It was a rattling metallic sound, and it reverberated along the empty halls like the crash of doom. It was for all the world as if something heavy, perhaps a piece of steel, had rolled clattering and jangling down the hard-wood stairs leading to the card-room.

In the silence that followed Liddy stirred and snored again. I was exasperated; first she kept me awake by silly alarms, then when she was needed she slept like Joe Jefferson, or Rip—they are always the same to me. I went in and aroused her, and I give her credit for being wide awake the minute I spoke.

"Get up," I said, "if you don't want to be murdered in your bed."

"Where? How?" she yelled vociferously, and jumped up.

"There's somebody in the house," I said. "Get up. We'll have to go to the telephone."

"Not out in the hall!" she gasped; "Oh, Miss Rachel, not out in the hall!" trying to hold me back. But I am a large woman and Liddy is small. We got to the door, somehow, and Liddy held a brass andiron, which it was all she could do to lift, let alone brain anybody with. I listened, and, hearing nothing, opened the door a little and peered into the hall. It was a black void, full of terrible suggestion, and my candle only emphasized the gloom. Liddy squealed and drew me back again, and as the door slammed, the mirror I had put on the transom came down and hit her on the head. That completed our demoralization. It was some time before I could persuade her she had not been attacked from behind by a burglar, and when she found the mirror smashed on the floor she wasn't much better.

A Hibernian Verdict.

A New Yorker is the happy employer of an aged Irishman, who grows eloquent over the woes of the Emerald isle. Said the boss: "Pat, the king of England is dead."

The old man was silent for a moment. Then he took off his hat.

"Well," he said slowly, "as a man he was a fine bit of a boy. As Englishmen go, he was as good as yez can make them. As a king, there was nobody on earth as could beat him. But still, I'll keep me eye on George."

Your Wife's Picture.

A man ought to be ashamed to live so that his wife is compelled to look as she does at housecleaning time. He'll allow her to buy cheap old yellow soap right along and take twice as long for her housework and washing, when Easy Task soap will save time, health and money for her. A man wouldn't tolerate old-fashioned methods in his place of business for a minute. If your wife would use Easy Task soap all the time there wouldn't be a tenth of the dirt to get rid of at housecleaning time.

For the Dog's Sake.

"Where are you going for your summer vacation this year?" asked Mrs. Gotrox.

"O, dear, I've not made up my mind yet," sighed Mrs. Rich wearily. "I want to find some quiet, restful spot, where my dear little French poodle can get plenty of fresh air."

Decidedly So.

WESTERN CANADA
What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:
"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel 180 miles north of the International boundary. Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly 70,000 Americans will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year.

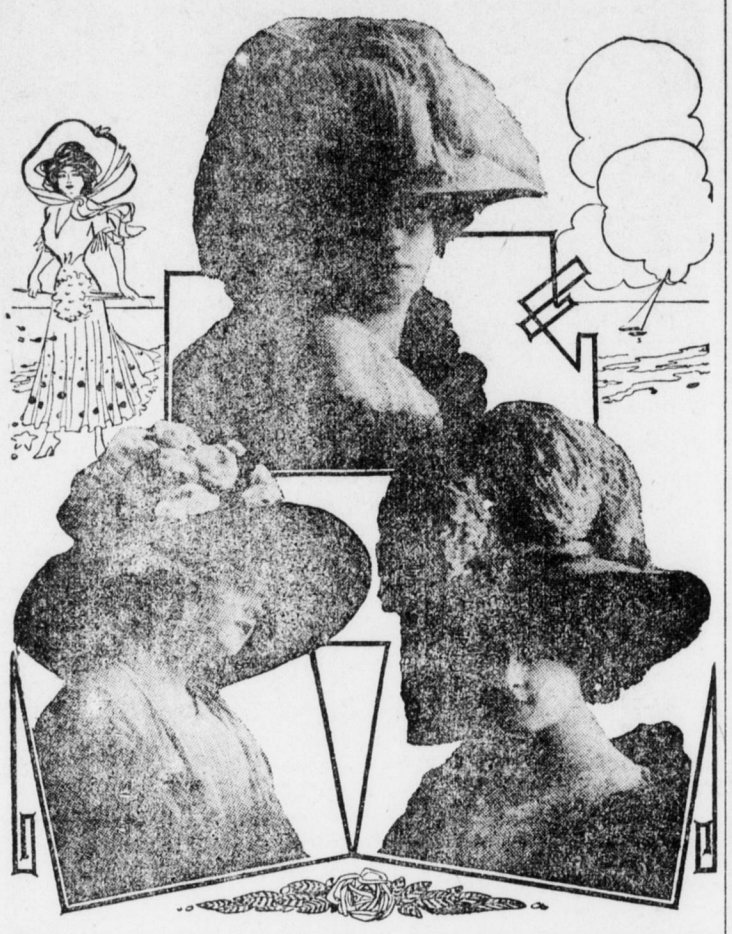
Midsummer Hats



JUST for the heads of youth and loveliness, one of that small company of designers who make Paris the top o' the world (in millinery), has given to us these three things of beauty for the summer girl. They look so simple! And they are in reality only broad-brimmed leghorn and hemp shapes with plumes and ribbon, or flowers and ribbon, for garniture. But their simplicity is only seeming. It is the result of a deep study of lines by a gifted artist. It is like the simplicity of a perfectly plain and perfectly fitted, tailored coat, a thing difficult of achievement.

These broad brims, droop and lift, flowing about the face and head in lines that make us wonder and envy, not at their own sweet will, but by the careful calculation of the mind that planned them. They are, indeed, fitted to the face and head. They compel us to note how they silhouette an exquisite profile, or point to the fine line of the eyebrows, or play up the depth of the eyes or veil half the pretty face in mystery.

On the broad brimmed leghorn with black velvet facing, a mass of delicate tulle roses and a curious lily in black velvet are banked against the crown. The brim, drooping gradually at the left, is so wide that it throws the entire profile, including the beautiful throat, and the neck, into high relief. The girl who chooses this must possess a profile worth while, because it will stand out like a stone cameo, with such a hat for a background.

The hemp hat covered with oddly mounted uncurled ostrich plumes is of a sort to carry off the honors at the Grand Prix, where millinery and horses triumph—but mostly millinery. It would surely hold its own in any meeting of those who make dress a study and vie with one another in display. Happy the bride or bridesmaid who may indulge herself in its counterpart. It is a hat for high occasion. There are four long, but not heavy, plumes, more like a soft mass of snow than anything else in nature. There is almost no curl in the long fibers. Such a hat never was and never will be out of style.

The third hat is more distinctly of the season. It has a bell-like brim with irregular edge and a fairly tall crown. Fuor long plumes are mounted at the right under a bow that is more than large. They fall completely over the crown, to the left brim. One half the face is in shadow from the sharp droop of the brim. This hat is almost universally becoming.

All these hats are set on the head in the proper position. It will be noticed that the pose is dignified—not rakish. The crowns are posed as they should be, directly on top of the head. It is the modeling of the brims that gives each hat its individuality and makes each extraordinary. As studies in midsummer high art millinery they must interest everyone. Those who would like fac-similes of any one of these must consider whether their features are of the same class or not, and remember that the rest of the toilette must play up to the hat. Such millinery is immensely useful for it is brimming over with good suggestions, which we will do well to follow—some of them at a discreet distance. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

PRETTY FOULARD WAIST

This simple waist is of dotted foulard, white ground, with blue dots. It is trimmed on each side of the front with a band of embroidery in colors, bordered with rolls of liberty.

Take Good Care of Your Gloves.

Gloves are another item about which many do not concern themselves sufficiently. A soiled glove looks as badly as a soiled collar, yet no one would think of wearing the latter, whereas gloves that reek with dirt and germs are worn with the greatest disregard for appearances and hygiene. Fastidious women find the chamois glove a delightful substitute for the regular kid, as it can be washed when soiled, wears as well as any other, and is much more comfortable. Gloves, like stockings, should be mended the moment they begin to show wear; in fact, every garment requires constant inspection to keep it in condition and always ready for use. —The Delineator.

SUMMER BEDROOM IN COLORS

Soft Shade of Green One of the Most Appropriate That Can Be Devised.

A beautiful green room of a summer cottage has been produced with green woodwork in one of the restful sage-green tints, the walls papered in a plain cartridge paper, with a frieze of stray vines, all in different shades of the same cool color. The wicker furniture is finished in a forest green stain and the carpet is covered with a green and white rug of fine, jointless matting. Sheer white mull curtains hang at the windows with straight-falling draperies of liberty silk of the same color over them. A white porcelain bedroom candlestick four feet high stands at the head of the bed. It is a straight column resting on a square block base, the fluted finish outlined in green. It holds a large green wax candle, at the side of which is a little holder for a box of matches. Other fittings of the room carry out the green and white scheme, and as the apartment faces the south, the effect has been to temper its high light and contribute a restfully subdued tone.

Black Jewelry to the Fore.

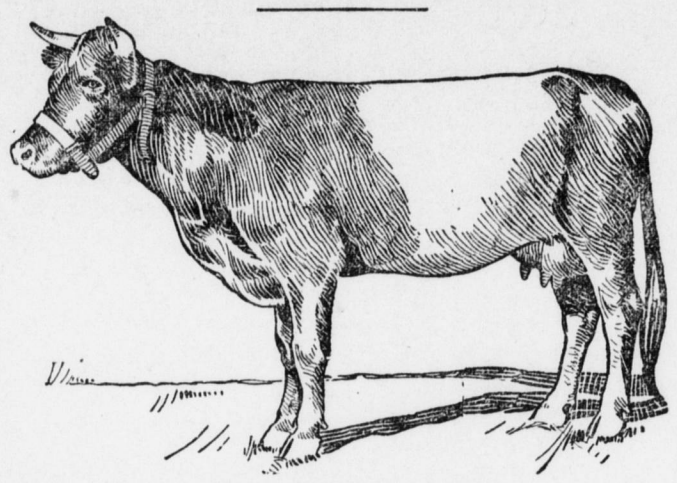
Black jewelry is threatening a return to extensive vogue. Whenever any calamity abroad brings a prominent part of the populace into mourning black jewelry is sure to come around again. Persons who remember the death of the prince consort tell interesting tales of the extent to which the craze went at that time. Everybody wore black ornaments, and jet. Jet is already in high esteem with the powers that direct the wardrobe and has been for a year or more, but the manufacturers are getting ready for a still greater demand for it than they have seen for two generations at least.

Salt For Freckles.

If you are troubled with freckles try putting a teaspoonful of salt in a basin of water and bathing the face with it. Do this occasionally and see how quickly they will fade.

GREAT IMPORTANCE OF SELECTING DAIRY HERD

Animals Chosen Should Be Carefully Examined and Tested Physically—Should Show Evidence of Health and Vigor.



First Prize Dutch Belted Heifer.

(By PROF. H. E. ALVORD.)

There is no point of greater importance in selecting animals for the foundation of a herd or in making purchases of additions than to get perfectly healthy stock. Animals chosen should be critically examined and should afford evidence of being strong in constitution and of healthful vigor. It is advised that all be tuberculin tested, and this of course should be done by a competent veterinarian. Besides the robust character of the individuals, the breeding stock from which they are descended and the herd, stables and farms from which they come should be closely examined on the score of health. Breeding and rearing the animals needed to replenish and increase the herd and refusing to allow strange animals on the farm are the best safeguards against the introduction of disease.

If purchases must be made let the new stock be strictly quarantined for at least one month before mingling with the herd. On every farm of any size a well-secluded building for a stock quarantine and hospital suitably arranged and equipped is a most useful adjunct. This not needed for calving cows or for cases of lameness or ordinary accident, but for cases of acute sickness, retention of afterbirth, abortion or any symptoms of contagious disease it is essential. Of course the building itself, its care and the attendance upon its occupants must be subjected to regulations suitable to any hospital or quarantine.

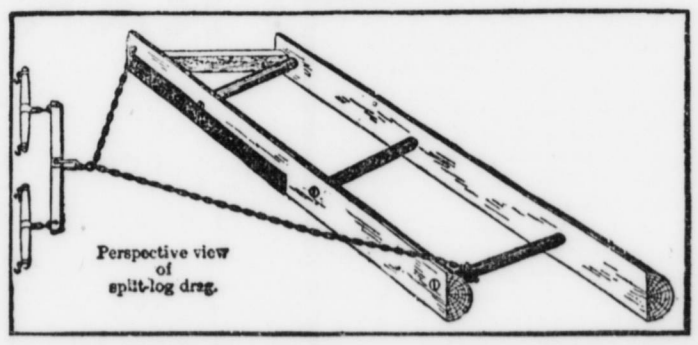
There are many of the ordinary accidents and ailments to which domestic animals are subject which can be managed by an intelligent owner or under his direction without professional assistance. "Every man his own cattle doctor," is a very delusive title; one may well follow this suggestion within reasonable limits, but there is always a point hard to define at which professional aid should promptly be summoned.

So long as an owner is certain of the difficulty and has knowledge and experience as to treatment or remedy he may depend upon home resources. But in cases of obscurity, uncertainty or complications the owner of a good cow disregards his own interests and his moral obligation if he fail to summon a veterinarian, as much as if he neglected to secure proper medical service for a sick child. And the veterinarian should be selected with the same care one exercises in choosing a family physician.

Close confinement, with impure air and lack of exercise, is as prejudicial to the health of milch cows as to that of human beings. Some recently promulgated theories of dark, warm stables and no exercise for profitable milk production are without a rational basis and certain to lead to disastrous results sooner or later. Exposure to storms and cold is equally injurious to the health and profit of cows. A judicous mean is the provision for moderate exercise in the open air and sunshine, and the application of the same common sense care for the comfort of cows which one would approve for members of his own household.

Every member of the herd, young or old, should pass under the critical eye of the owner or his trusty assistant daily, and preferably twice a day. The least symptom of disorder, like dulness, loss of appetite, rough coat and irregularity of milk, manure or urine, should be noted and promptly receive the attention which it deserves. Experience is needed on the part of the caretaker to detect and correct the beginnings of trouble and thus maintain the general health of the herd.

SPLIT-LOG DRAG IS USEFUL



Perspective view of split-log drag.

The split-log drag shown herewith is one of the simplest, cheapest, and yet the most useful and effective implements for the improvement of earth roads ever invented, a mere glance at which will enable any practical farmer to make one. In some states the farmers by common agreement drag the road along their own fronts after every rain, and the results are almost unbelievable.

Value of Sheep.

Sheep are great soil renovators and weed eradicators, but the man who would make a profit on them should not get the idea that they are simply scavengers.

IMPORTANCE OF FEEDING HENS

Problem on Which All Inexperienced People Go Broke Until They Have Mastered It—Few Master Science.

(By C. C. WENTZLER.)

Even professionals sometimes assert that the feeding is a matter of secondary importance. It is all important. It is the problem, the rock, on which all inexperienced people go broke until they have mastered it. Poultry feeding is a science. Few master the science.

It is the one thing in which common sense will not guide you. You can't feed common sense. It requires a knowledge of foods. Corn and wheat and meat are as far as the knowledge of some people extends. We should become familiar with the foods and learn what functions they perform.

We know that corn makes fat. We also know that fat is the fuel—the source of the chicken's heat and energy. There is very little egg-making principle in it, however. Wheat contains some fat. It also contains protein, which is needed for egg and tissue building. But it is one of a long line of egg-building foods. It is not the best food for feathers. And in some parts of the country it may be the most expensive of the egg-building foods. Corn, in some sections, is also prohibitive, owing to its price, to be used economically. It is then that knowledge of foods comes into play and suggests substitutes. Chickens, like all other live stock, require variety to do their best.

When chickens have unlimited range they balance their own foods and get what the system craves. When man feeds he has to furnish this balance. Common sense will not always decide how to get the balance.

Science in Farming.

Convince your son and daughter that to be successful on the farm they must have healthy bodies and bright minds and they must be proficient in mathematics, chemistry, physiology, pathology, bacteriology, biology, political and domestic economy and a half-dozen other sciences, and they will begin to respect the farm and stop calling farming "Dago business," and a little later the world will look up to the farmer, not down at him.

FROM THE MOUTHS OF BABES

Johnny Probably Told the Truth, but at a Dreadfully Inopportune Time.

A teacher in one of the lower grade schools was entertaining two visitors to the classroom. Several days previously the teacher had furnished amusement and at the same time increased the children's store of knowledge by a series of questions of the following nature:

"What do we sit on that rhymes with hair?"

Some child would answer: "Chair."

Today the visitors would be pleased to observe how readily the pupils could answer.

"What do I wear on my head that rhymes with cat?" asked the instructress.

Up went the hand of a boy with red hair.

"Well, Johnny," said she, "you may tell us."

Johnny arose and appeared frightened.

"It's a rat," he blurted.

And then the tableau.

BOY TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching with his nails and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

"I took care of a friend's child that had eczema on its face and limbs and I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. I would recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone. Mrs. A. J. Cochran, 1823 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 20, 1909."

Up to Date Milking Scene.

"What's going on around here?" asked the surprised visitor. "Is this a hospital?"

"Oh, no," answered the tall man in the silk hat; "this is the stage setting for a New England farm drama. The next act will be the milking scene."

"But I thought the young lady in the antiseptic apron was a trained nurse?"

"Oh, no; she is the milkmaid. The young man in the rubber gloves that you thought was a doctor is the farm boy. As soon as they bring in the sterilized stool and the pasteurized pails and find the cow's tooth brush the milking scene will begin."

Children's Skins.

Every now and then a child's skin will break out in some kind of a rash and folks think it caught the trouble at school or somewhere away from home. Half the time the trouble is caused by the use of unwholesome yellow soaps for washing clothing. They leave the dirt in the goods and make the clothing harsh and irritating to the skin. No wonder the rash breaks out. Easy Task soap is clean and white and sanitary and is best for children's clothes and yours, too. Get it at your grocer's.

There's a Reason.

"Paul, if I were to die, should you marry Widow Muller?"

"Good heavens, no!"

"Why not? Every one says how like me she is."

"Yes, that's just the reason."

Gunner—"They say since Coggwood bought his new automobile he has run into wealth." Guyer—"Yes, he ran into a 400-pound hog the other day."

SINNAMAHONING.

E. F. Smith, who is working for C. B. Howard Co., is spending a few days in town with his family.

Miss Florence Haynes visited relatives here this week.

Our town came near having a "blowing up" last Friday when through the carelessness of some of the employees of the Sinnamahoning Powder Mf'g Co., or failure of the brakes to work properly, three cars of powder got away from the engine and crashed into an obstruction near their ice house. Fortunately for our town the force was not great enough to explode the powder.

Miss McGonigal, who has been visiting the Misses Cole, has returned to her home.

The male employees of the Sinnamahoning Powder Co., works celebrated the completion of the government order by having a picnic last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Shafer have returned from a trip to New York State.

Mrs. Daniel Daugherty was called to Jamestown, N. Y., last week to attend the funeral of her brother's child.

Rev. T. J. Fulton, of Oriole, Pa., came to Sinnamahoning Monday evening and, in company with his sons T. E., and T. S. Fulton, and V. A. Brooks, made his annual fishing trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Baker and family, of Shingle House, visited Mrs Baker's sister, Mrs. T. S. Fulton, one day last week.

Nathan Silin is moving his stock into the new addition to his store.

It is rumored we are to have a couple new stores in town in the near future.

Mr. Israel Bailey, who has been an invalid for several years, died about noon last Friday and was buried at Wyside cemetery, Sunday afternoon. The services were conducted by Rev. R. W. Runyan, at the home of the deceased. Mr. Bailey was 81 years of age and is survived by one son, Arthur, of this place, and two daughters, Mrs. Abbie Jones, of Coudersport and Mrs. Isaac Floyd of this place. Mr. Bailey's wife died in April of this year.

July 20th, 1910. XXX.

Died at his home, Friday, July 15, 1910, Israel Bailey. Deceased was the son of Hon. Judge Bailey and lived on the First Fork till a few years ago when he gave up lumbering and moved to Sinnamahoning and built a pleasant home. Deceased leaves one brother and two sisters, one son and two daughters: Alphonzo Bailey, Mrs. R. M. Williams, First Fork; Mrs. Sadie Keck, of Wharton; Mrs. Annie Jones, Coodersport, Mrs. Maggie Floyd and Arthur Bailey, Sinnamahoning. Deceased was 81 years old. Funeral services were held at the home by Rev. Runyan. Burial at the Wyside cemetery on the banks of the Sinnamahoning on Sunday at two o'clock. A large gathering of friends were present to pay their last respect. Undertaker C. M. Wykoff had charge of the funeral. The pall bearers were nephews of deceased.

W. H. Metzger has sold his place at Wyside to Jesse P. Michaels.

Saving Time on Time Tables.

To most people, especially when they are on the road, time is money, but time tables are not convertible into cash. In the pages of "Through Savage Europe" Harry De Windt gives a curious and amusing experience on a Russian railway some years ago. The patience of the Russians is in marked contrast with the impatience of American travelers. All Russians have a rooted antipathy to fast railway travel, if one may judge from an incident which occurred some years ago when I was travelling across the Caucasus from Batoum to Baku. We had reached a tunnel, at the entrance of which the train waited for at least twenty minutes.

"There is something wrong," I remarked to a fellow passenger.

"Oh, no," he replied; "we are only making up the time. This tunnel was recently made to avoid a long bend round a range of hills, and as it now cuts off several miles a short delay is necessary so as to fit in with the scheduled time."

"But surely we should save time by going on," I urged.

"Perhaps so," said my friend. "But then, you see, they would have to alter all the time tables."

Form of Divorce In Old Rome.

In the earlier period of the Roman republic divorces were quite unknown and were rare right up to the time of the Sullan wars. In the old days the husband and wife who wished to separate appeared for the last time before the common hearth, a priest and priestess being present. As on the day of marriage, a cake of wheaten flour was presented to the husband and wife, but instead of sharing it between them they rejected it. Then, instead of prayers, they pronounced formulas of a strange, severe, spiteful character, by which the wife renounced the worship and gods of the husband. From that moment the religious bond was broken, and the community of worship having ceased to exist, the marriage without further ado was forever dissolved.—New York American.

Floral Etymology.

"Primrose" is one of those words that have shown popular association to be stronger than etymology. It has no real connection with the rose, but is the old French "primerole" and, anyhow, means only the "prime" or first flower (more or less) of the year. Our language has insisted upon making "roses" of all sorts of flowers. We have the tuberose, which is only "tuberosa," tuberous, and the rosemary, which is "rosmarinus," dew of the sea. On the other hand the "rose" has been dropped readily enough in cases where popular fancy could not see the flower. The alchemists called green vitriol "rose of copper," "cuprirosa." In French this became "couperose," but English wore it down to the pointless "copperas."—London Chronicle.

The Dancing Mania.

The "dancing mania" of the middle ages came on the heels of the great plague known as the "black death." It was some sort of nervous disease and is now supposed to have been what is known as "St. Vitus' dance." It began in the year 1374 at Aix-la-Chapelle and spread all over Germany, the Netherlands and Italy. The dancers formed circles hand in hand and appearing to have lost all reason, continued dancing, regardless of the bystanders, for hours together until in their wild delirium they fell to the ground in sheer exhaustion. Panting and foaming at the mouth, they would suddenly spring up and begin the dance again, to be again exhausted, and so on until they died. The mania involved millions of people.

The Twelve Jurymen.

A prisoner is tried by twelve of his fellow countrymen. This custom is a thousand years old, and we get it from the vikings. The vikings divided their country up into cantons, which were subdivided into twelve portions, each under a chieftain. When a malefactor was brought to justice it was usual for each chieftain to select a man from the district over which he ruled and compel him to try the prisoner, the verdict of these twelve men being declared by the judge to be final.

Made Her Mad.

"I thought I overheard you and your wife quarreling a little while ago. What was the trouble?"

"She brought home a new hat, and after putting it on she turned to me and said she didn't believe it was becoming."

"Well?"

"I agreed with her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A One Sided Rule.

Once when P. T. Barnum was taking tickets at the entrance of his circus a man asked him if he could go in without paying.

"You can pay without going in," said Barnum, "but you can't go in without paying. The rule doesn't work both ways."

Not by Exclusion.

He—I had a hard time getting a good wife.

She—Goodness! Have you been married several times?

"Oh, no. But I courted my present one six years."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Usually the Way.

Maud—How do you know?

"She told me so."

To forgive a fault in another is more sublime than to be faultless oneself.—George Sand.

Hairs Upon Horses' Lips.

The fine hairs about the mouth of the horse are organs of touch of extreme delicacy. They serve to a certain extent the same purpose as our finger ends, the whiskers of the cat or the trunk of the elephant. Sensitiveness is due to specially developed endings of nerves in the skin, which are continually sending messages to the brain. The lip hairs of the horse first receive the stimulus, which is communicated to the end organs and so passes on to the brain. They come into play when the horse samples a new article of food. He first smells it and, having so far satisfied himself, touches it delicately with those sensitive hairs. The upper lip moves softly in quick sympathy and confirms the opinion suggested by the hairs. The tongue judges finally as to the fitness of the food. When the horse wishes to drink these hairs assure him that the water is free from foreign matter on the surface, for he drinks from the surface only. They detect the smallest particle of dirt and guide him to the purest place.

The Simple Diet.

There is a certain banker and broker doing business not a hundred miles from the bank, says a London weekly, whose health for some time has not been all that he could desire. Not long ago he was complaining to his brother, when the latter after a careful survey of his brother's countenance said:

"What you need, old man, is plain country food. Come to my place in the country and we'll soon set you up. This rich food is proving too much for you. Take breakfast, for instance. All I have is two cups of coffee, a bit of steak with a baked potato, some light muffins or a stack of buttered toast, together with a bit of watercress or lettuce. What do you have?"

"A cup of hot water and two slices of dry toast," he replied soberly. "But, Jim, if you think a simple diet like yours will 'set me up,' why, I'm perfectly willing to try it."

The Story of "Hard Hit."

"Mr. Orchardson, if I thought that by killing you I could paint a picture like yours I would stab you to the heart." Such was the remark made by Pellegrini, the famous caricaturist, to the Royal academician, Sir William Orchardson, when at a private view he first saw "Hard Hit," the picture of the ruined gambler. "It was," said the artist, "the greatest compliment I could have had." Curiously enough, the model who sat for the ruined gamester was rather fond of cards himself. One day the artist noticed that he looked somewhat depressed. "What is the matter?" he asked. "I was awfully hard hit last night," he answered. "By Jove," replied the artist, jumping up with delight, "I've got it at last! 'Hard Hit,' of course." And that is how the picture got its name.

Six Follies of Science.

The six follies of science are the squaring of the circle, perpetual motion, the philosopher's stone, the elixir of life, magic and astrology.

In all ages men of undoubted ability have toiled early and late to unravel the mysteries supposed to be connected with these fascinating problems. It is not always remembered that such intellectual giants as Bacon, Sir Robert Boyle and Sir Isaac Newton sought the philosopher's stone. In the study of astrology Lilly was for a time even pensioned by parliament.

Most of these "follies" conferred indirect benefits upon science, for in seeking one thing their devotees discovered many another. The craze for the secret, or unknown, has still its hold upon men and is seen in palmistry and kindred cults.

To Take No Chances.

Hamlar—Why in the dickens have you got that string tied around your tooth?

Absente—To remind me that I must have the tooth removed.

Hamlar—But, goodness gracious, why don't you do as ordinary people and have the string tied around your finger?

Absente (stiffly)—Because, sir, I don't care to have my finger removed.—Chicago News.

Mistake of a Comma.

The importance of what a mistake of a comma can produce has been noticed:

"Lord Palmerston then entered upon his head, a white hat upon his feet, large but well polished boots upon his brow, a dark cloud in his hand, his faithful walking stick in his eye, a dark menacing glare saying nothing."—Circle Magazine.

Quite So.

"There seems to be a strange affinity between a darky and a chicken."

"Naturally. One is descended from Ham and the other from eggs."—Housekeeper.

Easy.

"She's made a fool of that young fellow."

"Well, she didn't have to economize on the raw material."—Baltimore American.

Good Will.

Have good will to all that lives, letting unkindness die, and greed and wrath, so that your lives be made like soft airs passing by.—"Light of Asia."

Generally Has That Effect.

She—I wonder why Methuselah lived to such a great old age. He—Perhaps some young woman married him for his money.—Boston Transcript.

Respond to Blue Eyes.

"Every little while physiologists come to the front with some advantage accruing to people who have blue eyes," said the city salesman. "Well, I discovered a point that they have never mentioned. A jeweler told me. He is manager of the jewelry department of a big store. I applied to him for a situation for my wife's cousin.

"'What's the color of her eyes?' he asked.

"'Brown,' I said.

"'Bring her down and I will take a look at her,' he said, 'but I am afraid she won't do. People with a certain shade of blue eyes make the best jewelry salesmen. Many customers who buy jewelry want some one to try it on so they can get the effect of the stones when worn. There is something about deep blue eyes that brings out the best lights in most jewels. Take notice and you will find that two-thirds of the jewelry salesmen in New York have blue eyes.'"—New York Times.

Stingy Queen Bess.

Every one who ever did anything for Queen Bess seems to have been left with a bad debt on his books. So we find an unfortunate John Conley writing to Sir Robert Cecil that for the last two years he had been suitor for £100 for "beeves for the army" and complaining that "unless some order be taken I shall be undone." Sir Edward Hastyngs, after spending his life in serving the queen, had to pawn his wife's jewels and beg her majesty "to bestow something upon me in this my latter age." So badly was the fleet that beat the armada provisioned that Francis Drake had to seize at Plymouth ninety bags of rice, and the unfortunate owner, after ten years' waiting, was refused payment, "rice being an extraordinary victual not allowed for the navy." Nor did common soldiers fare better. The chief anxiety of all Elizabeth's ministers ought, in her view, to have been how to save most money.—London Telegraph.

Eating For the Love of It.

Pawlow has given epicureanism in eating strong scientific support, and many of Horace Fletcher's ideas find orthodox justification. The first rule of dietetic conduct, according to Fletcher, is to eat only when one is hungry and to eat only the things from which one anticipates enjoyment. He also teaches that one must eat in the way that gives the greatest sensual pleasure—that is, by thorough chewing and tasting; also serenity of mind, pleasant surroundings at a meal, congenial friends, pleasurable conversation—in fact, everything that adds to enjoyment aids digestion. In other words, the process of digestion furnishes a beautiful illustration of the influence of mind upon matter. The inspiring stimulus is not mechanical, but psychic. The preliminary essential to the orderly assimilation of food is the keen desire for it.—McClure's Magazine.

A Paradoxical River.

On the African shore, near the gulf of Aden and connecting the lake of Assal with the main ocean, may be found one of the most wonderful rivers in the world. This curiosity does not flow to but from the ocean toward inland. The surface of Lake Assal itself is nearly 700 feet below the mean tide, and it is fed by this paradoxical river, which is about twenty-two miles in length. It is highly probable that the whole basin which the lagoon partly fills was once an arm of the sea which became separated therefrom by the duning of loose sand. The inflowing river has a limited volume, being fullest, of course, at high tide, and has filled the basin to such an extent that evaporation and supply exactly balance each other.

His Maternal Grandma.

A devoted father after a day's absence was met by his two little sons.

"Have you been good boys?"

Silence.

"Have you been good boys?"

"No, papa; I called grandma a bad word," said five-year-old, turning scarlet.

"Is it possible? What did you call your grandma?"

"I called her a human being."

The father, with a mighty effort, maintained his gravity and closed the scene decorously. "I must forgive you for once, but remember if you ever call your grandmother a human being again I shall have to spank you."

Stated a Fact.

"Do you see the horizon yonder where the sky seems to meet the earth?"

"Yes, uncle."

"Boy, I have journeyed so near there that I couldn't put a sixpence between my head and the sky."

"Oh, uncle, what a whopper!"

"It's a fact, my lad. I hadn't one to put."—Pearson's Weekly.

An Unnecessary System.

"You ought to have a burglar alarm system in your house," said the electrical supply agent, "so that you will be awakened if a burglar raises one of the windows or opens a door at night."

"No burglar can get in here while we are peacefully sleeping," replied Mr. Newpop. "We are weaning our baby."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Notable Exceptions.

Mrs. Bloobumper—Yes, everybody is always ready to give advice.

Bloobumper—There are exceptions.

"Are there?"

"Yes; doctors and lawyers."

The lessons of life are lost if they do not impress us with the necessity of making ample allowances for the immature conclusions of others.

Going Round the World.

In sailing around the world eastward the days are each a little less than twenty-four hours, according to the speed of the ship, as the sun is met a little earlier every morning. These little differences added together will amount to twenty-four hours. This gives the sailors an extra day—not in imagination, but as an actual fact. They will have done an extra day's work, eaten an extra day's ration of food and imbibed an extra day's allowance of grog.

On the other hand, in sailing westward the sun is overtaken a little each day, and so each day is rather longer than twenty-four hours, and clocks and watches are found to be too fast. This also will amount in sailing around the world to the point of departure to one whole day by which the reckoning has fallen in arrears. The eastern bound ship, then, has gained a day, and the western bound ship has lost one. This strange fact, clearly worked out, leads to the apparent paradox that the first named ship has a gain of two whole days over the latter, if we suppose them to have departed from port and returned together.—Philadelphia Record.

Modern Gold Mining.

Up until about 1850 only placer or surface gold was mined—that is, free gold, deposited in the beds of streams, in sands and in the crevices of rocks. Placer mining, mainly in new and remote regions, still furnishes a material though not a large percentage of the world's output. Formerly the alluvial gold was separated from the sands and gravels containing it by washing them in pans, cradles, rockers and sluices. In 1852 the hydraulic method was first employed in California. By this means a "giant" stream of water turned against the side of a mountain washes everything before it. The gold settles to the bottom of the tunnel or sluice through which the gravel, sand and water flow. In 1889 dredges or excavators were first used in Australia. Today steam and electric dredges produce a considerable portion of the world's output.—Byron W. Holt in Everybody's.

Why Boiled Water Freezes Easily.

Water which is hot of course cannot freeze until it has parted with its heat, but water that has been boiled will, other things being equal, freeze sooner than water which has not been boiled. A slight disturbance of water disposes it to freeze more rapidly, and this is the cause which accelerates the freezing of boiled water. The water that has been boiled has lost the air naturally contained in it, which on exposure to the atmosphere it begins again to attract and absorb. During this process of absorption a motion is necessarily produced among its particles, slight certainly and imperceptible, yet probably sufficient to accelerate its congelation. In unboiled water this disturbance does not exist. Indeed, water when kept perfectly still can be reduced several degrees below the freezing point without its becoming ice.

Gardens In the Ice.

A glacier when it dislodges itself and sails away over the Arctic ocean never travels alone. In the wake of every large one floats a line of similar companions. The Eskimos call this phenomenon "the duck and ducklings," and any one who has watched the progress of the wild duck followed by her brood will appreciate the aptitude of the name. Strange as it may seem, plants grow and blossom upon these great ice mountains. When a glacier is at rest moss attaches itself to it, protecting the ice beneath, just as sawdust does. After a time the moss decays and forms a soil, in which the seeds of buttercups and dandelions, brought by the wind, take root and flourish. Those who have traveled much in arctic lands say the poppy does not bloom during the brief northern summer.

A Bismarck Incident.

It used to be the privilege of Austria's representative at any conference of representatives of the German states to smoke, the others refraining. This was supposed to be an acknowledgment of Austria's supremacy. At the first conference that Bismarck attended as Prussia's representative he began to puff smoke across the conference table as soon as the Austrian diplomat lit up. That set everybody present to smoking on equal terms, and Austria's supremacy got a blow.

A Timely Warning.

"Your dog seems a very intelligent animal," remarked an inexperienced sportsman to a gamekeeper.

"Yessir," was the ready response. "Wonderful intelligent 'e is! Yes, t'other day 'e bit a gent as only give me a 'arf sovereign after a day's shoot!"—London Scraps.

Her Dear Friend.

Susie—Now, when I'm asked to sing I never say, "Oh, I can't!" I always sit down at the piano— Jennie—And let the audience find it out for themselves?—Illustrated Bits.

The First Step.

Young Woman (before milliner's window, to her maid)—That hat is perfectly lovely. I must have it. Marie, be sure to remind me to kiss my husband when I get home.

Quickly Subdued.

Von Blumer (roaring with rage)—Who told you to put paper on the wall? Decorator—Your wife, sir. Von Blumer—Pretty, isn't it?

Looks like ever'thing in the world comes right if we jes' wait long enough.—Mrs. Wiggs.

Ready For the Next One.

A generous and brave but very eccentric Virginia planter named Hill Carter, who had once been an officer in the United States navy, had a hand to hand battle at fisticuffs one day with his plantation overseer and came off second best. He therefore challenged the overseer to a formal duel, but the latter declined on the ground that, being a husband and father, he was under obligation not to risk leaving his family destitute. Carter at once removed that objection by settling upon the family a comfortable annuity. Then everything was got ready for the fight, but just as the two men faced each other the sheriff arrived on the scene, took them into custody and had them bound over to keep the peace. Mr. Carter did not, however, change the deed of gift with which he had provided for the overseer's family, remarking that he might wish some time to resume the interrupted fight and hence would rather keep everything in readiness for prompt action.—New York Post.

Consul King David.

This amusing anecdote of Lamartine is related by the Baroness Bonde in her volume of letters. Shortly after the revolution of February he wrote on the blank leaves of his pocketbook the names of his proteges and sent the list to be provided with places immediately. Previously, however, it seems, he had scribbled "David" on the page, and the head of the cabinet appointed the said David consul at Bremen. The postulant, however, never came forward, and, though the poet did not like being disturbed, M. Hetzel was obliged to ask who was the David on his list.

"He who danced before the ark," was the answer.

"Oh, dear! I have gazetted him to Bremen!"

"How very singular! I meant him for a subject for meditation, not for nomination. But you can cancel it."

The moniteur registered the change, but few knew that the last consul appointed to Bremen was King David!

Language of Switzerland.

It is a curious fact that the people most celebrated for love of country should in a manner be without a language—that is, a mother tongue. The Swiss have three official languages—German, French and Italian. About three-fourths of the population of the mountain confederation speak German, while the remainder divide four other languages among them, chiefly French and Italian, these languages being found, as a rule, in districts in close proximity to the countries wherein those languages are the principal tongue. In Switzerland documents and notices are printed in both the French and German languages. In the national assembly members deliver their speeches in either French or German, for nearly all members understand both tongues. The decrees and proclamations of the president are translated by an official interpreter and furnished to the press in both languages.—New York Press.

Her Fault.

The teacher in charge of the primary department at a school in West Philadelphia was talking the other day about her work and her pupils.

"They are dear youngsters," she said, "but they sometimes make curious remarks. Several times I have had occasion to reprove a little boy who isn't bad, but who is very mischievous and annoying. He is always getting into trouble and making a disturbance.

"One day he had been more than usually uproarious, and I was very tired. Instead of scolding or punishing him I began in rather an exasperated tone to talk to him.

"'Tom,' I said, 'I'm afraid I'm never going to meet you in heaven.'

"He looked up with the most shocked face. 'Why, teacher,' he said, 'isn't that just too bad? What have you done?'"—Philadelphia Times.

A Modest Request.

An impeccably dressed gentleman the other day when walking along Piccadilly felt a movement in his pocket and, clapping his hand thereto, seized the wrist of the thief. He drew forth the erring member, and, looking at it with supreme disgust, he released it, saying, with a grimace of disgust, "For heaven's sake, my good man, go and wash your hands before you put them in a gentleman's pocket again!"—London Tatler.

Made Him Feel Old.

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, nothing much."

"But you look as if you had something serious on your mind."

"Well, if you insist on knowing, a boy who was named after me has just become engaged to be married. How time flies!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Dollar Mark.

"Have you seen the Washington monument?"

"Yes," replied the New Yorker. "It's a pretty tall building, but what's the good of it without any offices for rent?"—Washington Star.

Economy.

Husband—Excuse me, dear, but don't you cook much more for dinner than we can use?—Wife—Of course! If I didn't how could I economize by utilizing leftover dishes?—Cleveland Leader.

Not New.

"Electricity isn't a modern discovery. It is as old as the flood."

"How do you make that out?"

"Why, didn't Noah have to have ark lights?"

Better a blush in the face than a blot in the heart.—Cervantes.

Why the Wind Waits.

In his book on "The Picturesque St Lawrence" Clifton Johnson tells of the curious superstition of Montreal which explains why the wind is always blowing at the point where St Sulpice and Notre Dame streets meet close by the towering cathedral.

It seems that one day, while the church was in process of building, the Wind and the Devil were walking down Notre Dame street, and the Devil after regarding with a look of disapproval the graceful spire of the new edifice rising before them exclaimed:

"What is this? I never saw it before."

"Very likely not," responded the Wind, "and I dare you to go in there."

"You dare me to do that, do you?" cried the Devil, with an oath. "Well, I will go in if you will promise to wait here until I come out."

"Agreed," said the Wind.

So his satanic majesty went in. But he has not come out yet, and the Wind is still waiting for him at the corner.

The Spirit of Liberty.

It was in the town that modern democracy had its rise. Despite all the efforts of the kings and barons to prevent it, the spirit of liberty began to assert itself in the larger towns in the shape of the charters which guarantee to the people certain commercial and political rights—rights which, once obtained, were never to be surrendered. Before the middle of the eleventh century there were many of these "chartered" towns which possessed the right of electing their own magistrates, sheriffs and judges and regulating their own taxes. The wretched serfs from the country were welcomed by the townspeople and aided to larger freedom. These free towns were first known in Spain, from which country they slowly spread over Europe. The burgesses naturally offered protection and freedom to all who would flee to them from the feudal estates, and the slowly, but surely, the good work went on until the ancient despotisms were destroyed.—Arena.

Reptiles That Walk Erect.

Lizards of several sorts can walk and run easily on their hind legs. The Australian water lizard, which is three or four feet in length, keeps quite erect when traversing long distances on land. It is found in the neighborhood of river banks and passes much of its time in shallow water.

The frilled lizard of Queensland also travels on its hind legs on level ground, keeping the frill folded when running. When attacked it expands this fold of skin, which stands out like a ruff at right angles round the neck, giving it a most formidable aspect, so that dogs that attack and kill larger lizards will often retreat before a frilled lizard at bay.

There is also a tree lizard in Australia that moves in a similar way. All these species walk on all fours when merely moving about or going short distances.

The Bride's Troubles.

It was the servant's day out, and the young bride was doing her best to hurry along the dinner she was trying to cook. The husband, tired of waiting, bustled into the kitchen and said impatiently:

"You know, we'll be late for the theater if you don't hurry dinner."

"Well," sighed the bride, "I can't tell what's the matter, but these coffee grains simply won't boil soft, and as for the eggs, they've been boiling at least two hours, and they're still as hard as ever."

But the dinner was concluded at last, and then the young husband declared he couldn't find his silk hat.

"Oh," exclaimed his wife, "you said it needed ironing, you know, so I sent it this morning to the laundry with the wash."

Settling the Barber.

"Hair's a bit thin on the top, sir," remarked the barber. "Won't you try a bottle of our hair restorer?"

The victim squirmed. "You made the same observation last week," he said, "and I expressed my desire to see you try the stuff on the doormat."

"Sorry; I didn't know you had been here before, sir," replied the barber as he went on shaving. "I didn't recognize your face."

"No," was the growling reply; "my face has healed since then."—London News.

The Maid's Reply.

As William bent over her fair face he whispered:

"Darling, if I should ask you in French if I might kiss you what would you answer?"

She, calling up her scanty knowledge of the French language, exclaimed, "Billet doux!"—Exchange.

Suspense.

"There isn't any suspense about your play," said the technical critic.

"That shows how you jump at conclusions," replied the author. "You just ought to see me waiting for royalties."—Exchange.

The Epicurean Badger.

The badger is a great epicure in eggs, and much of the hostility of gamekeepers to this animal lies undoubtedly in the fact that it will, when it gets the chance, devour a whole nest of partridge or pheasant eggs. Badgers are said also to be fond of honey, and, knowing the extraordinary craving of their South African cousin, the ratel, for this delicacy, I should say it is not improbable that they may occasionally partake of it. It is certain that these animals have a particular liking for the nest and larvae of wasps and wild bees, digging down with strong feet and infinite perseverance till they attain their object. These animals are said by keepers to kill and devour freely young rabbits. That they do partake of this fare at times is, I think, certain, but that they destroy any very considerable number is more than doubtful. Still, the badger is carnivorous in his tastes and is not, even by his kindliest friends, to be absolved from devouring at times render rabbits and even the young of game birds when he can get hold of them.—Westminster Gazette.

Strange Fishing Matches.

In the olden time in England lords and ladies sometimes invented queer amusements. They were always on the lookout for some novelty, and one of the strangest they discovered was fishing by a goose. A line with a baited hook attached having been fastened to the goose, tied to its leg, she was flung into the water from the boat in which were all the gay lords and ladies. Then, when a pike caught the bait, she was sport indeed, a royal battle between bird and fish, and all the time, between the loud splashings, wheelings and flounderings, the onlookers in the boat giving vent to their feelings in cheers, handclappings and handkerchief waving. But the goose was usually the victor and ended the struggle by landing its prisoner on the shore, where its quack-quack as it cleared itself from the line and waddled away ended the scene. The lake of Monteith, in the southwest of Perthshire, was often the scene of such angling matches.

The Soldier Ant.

The lion is the king of beasts, but all of his magnificent strength and ferocity would avail him nothing when he faced a mere ant. But this ant is not the usual kind which peacefully goes about its domestic duties day by day. It is the terrible driver or soldier ant, said to be the most invincible creature in the world. Against these tiny enemies no man or band of men, no lion or tiger, not even a herd of elephants, can do anything but hurriedly get out of the way. Among the Barotse natives a favorite form of capital punishment is to coat the victim with grease and throw him before the advancing army of soldier ants. The quickness with which the poor wretch is dispatched is marvelous when it is considered that each ant can do nothing more than merely tear out a small particle of flesh and carry it off. Yet in a surprisingly short time the writhing victim will have been changed into a skeleton.

Old Saws and Sayings.

A few old sayings on the subject of food come to us rather as a surprise in our age of daintiness and refinement, yet they have their raison d'etre notwithstanding. "Meat is much, manners are more;" "Cease your chatter and mind your platter;" "The ass that brays most eats least;" "The wing with the liver to him who's the giver;" "He can give little to his servant who licks his own trencher."

Apropos of this remark, it is amusing to note that "manners" was the name given to the remnants of a meal. These came to the servants as official perquisites; hence our well worn expression before emptying a dish, "Leave the last slice (or whatever it may be) for manners," though if votes were collected on this point it is hardly likely that any of us would have taken it as it stands in the original.

Carthage's Great Snake.

The ancients firmly believed in monster serpents of all kinds and of both the land and marine species. During the wars with Carthage a great snake is said to have kept the Roman army from crossing the Bagrados river for several days. The monster swallowed up no less than seventy Roman soldiers during this combat and was not conquered until a hundred stones from as many different catapults were fired upon it all at one time. The monster skull and skin were preserved and afterward exhibited in one of the Roman temples. The dried skin of the creature was 120 feet in length, according to Pliny.

Throat Trouble.

"You look bad, old man. What's the matter?"

"Throat trouble."

"I didn't know you were subject to it."

"Yes, I am. This throat belongs to the newcomer in the next house, who practices singing at all hours of the night."

Past Is Past.

Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities, no doubt, crept in. Forget them as soon as you can.—Emerson.

The Drawback.

"Can't you live just as cheap in the suburbs as in town?"

"Yes, but everybody knows it out there."—Life.

Distance is a great promoter of admiration.—Diderot.

His Game Won.

In a campaign in Kansas some years ago, when the tariff was made a dominant issue, an old German was running for a county office in central Kansas. He didn't know enough about the tariff to talk about it two minutes. More than that, he didn't care much, for it had nothing whatever to do with the office he wanted anyway. But the voters were much excited over the question and seemed to think that every candidate should be able to discuss the problem from A to Izzard.

So this German and his campaign manager invented a successful subterfuge. When the German got up at the meetings to talk he would say: "Now, shentlemen, I vill talk mit you about der tariff. It is like"—

Just then his campaign manager would interrupt: "Why, John, you have only five minutes to talk. You cannot do yourself justice in that length of time on the tariff."

"Then I won't talk about dot tariff," would be John's inevitable reply, and he would go on to tell that he wanted a certain county office, and so on. His game won, and he was elected.—Kansas City Journal.

Wheat Does Not Grow Wild.

The existence of names for wheat in the most ancient languages confirms the evidence of its great antiquity and of its cultivation in the more temperate parts of Europe, Asia and Africa. From the evidence adduced by botanists of high standing it seems highly improbable that wheat has ever been found growing persistently in a wild state, although it has often been asserted by poets, travelers and historians. In the "Odyssey," for example, we are told that wheat formerly grew in Sicily without the aid of man. Diodorus repeats the tradition that Osiris found wheat and barley growing promiscuously in Palestine, but neither this nor other reputed discoveries of wheat growing wild seem at all credible, seeing that it does not appear to be endowed with the power of persistency except under continued culture.

The Mind During Sleep.

"During sleep," says an authority on mental subjects, "the workings of the mind are under no control, and yet it seems to have a wonderful faculty of building up and arranging scenes and incidents. I remember once having a vivid dream of going into a house the furniture and inmates of which belonged to the middle ages. So clear was the dream that I had no difficulty in recalling it, and then as I went over each detail of dress, armor, jewelry, ornaments and other objects seen in my vision I realized that everything I had beheld was historically accurate—that is to say, that probably in a fraction of a second my mind had conjured up a scene to construct which, with the same faithfulness to detail, while awake would have taken me several hours."

The Use of Condiments.

In an article on the use of condiments the London Lancet, the foremost British medical publication, says: "The classic experiments of Pawlow have shown how important is the role of the condiments in diet, how it is they improve appetite and increase digestive power. Mustard, pepper and salt, used, of course, in sensible amounts, assist the appetite, give a zest to food and partly by reflex action as well as local action stimulate the flow of digestive juices and insure healthy assimilation. Even vinegar is known to have a softening effect on tough fibers, and hence its use is justified in so many instances."

The English Pheasant.

It is claimed that the pheasant of the English preserves can trace its pedigree directly to the brilliant bird of the same species in Japan. About the middle of the nineteenth century a few live pheasants were brought from Japan and crossed with the common species. The result of this was, it is said, that a new race of birds was introduced, and the beautiful pheasant, with its iridescent plumage, was produced and naturalized as an English bird.

Coals of Fire.

"I thought," said he, "that those people treated you so badly, and now see! They invite you to their reception. Shall you go?"

"Why, certainly," said she. "Their inviting me showed they harbored no grudge against me for the way they treated me."—New York Press.

Well Answered.

"Oh, no; I don't claim to be any different or any brighter than the balance of mankind. I expect I shall marry some fool woman some of these days."

"If you ever marry that's the kind of a woman you will marry, all right."—Rochester Union.

A Telltale Touch.

"Is it true that sightless people can tell the color of things by touch?" some one asked a blind man.

"Occasionally, yes," came the answer. "If, for instance, I touched a redhot poker I could tell it was red."

Swift's Sarcasm.

"My brethren," said Dean Swift in a sermon, "there are three sorts of pride—of riches, of birth and of talents. I shall not now speak of the latter, none of you being liable to that abominable vice."

She Got It.

He (time 11:30 p. m.)—And you will think of me when I am gone? She (suppressing a yawn)—I'll try to if you'll ever give me an opportunity.

Presence of Mind.

A visitor to an insane asylum was walking in the grounds when a man came up to him and entered into conversation. After walking about for some time, discussing topics suggested by the place, the two set out on a tour of inspection, the man, apparently an official, inviting the visitor to go over the asylum. At length they reached the foot of a flight of steps, up which the guide led the way, and at the top the visitor found himself out upon the roof, a height of more than a hundred feet from the ground. As they gazed below his companion startled him suddenly by proposing to see who could jump farthest toward the grounds! Not until then had it dawned upon the visitor that his guide was mad. Mercifully he was a man of ready wit, and his wit saved the madman's life. "Oh, anybody can jump down," said the visitor. "Let us go down and see who can jump to the top." The madman thought it a good idea, and, retracing their steps, the two began their jump from the earth instead of from the roof.

The Mammoth Cave Rat.

The cavern rat found in the Mammoth cave is of a soft bluish color, with white neck and feet. It has enormous eyes, black as night, but quite unprovided with an iris. These eyes are perfectly insensible to light, and when the experiment has been made of catching a cavern rat and turning it loose in bright sunlight it blunders about, striking itself against everything, is unable to provide itself with food and finally falls down and dies. In its native depths, however, it is able to lead a comfortable enough existence, as its enormously long whiskers are so extremely sensitive that they enable it to find its way rapidly through the darkness. The principal food of the cavern rat consists of a kind of large cricket of a pale yellow color and, like most other cave dwellers, itself perfectly blind.

The Lilies.

Two thousand years ago it was supposed that water lilies closed their flowers at night and retreated far under water, to emerge again at sunrise. This was Pliny's view, and it was not impeached until the English botanist John Ray in 1688 first doubted its veracity. The great lily of Zanzibar, one of the grandest of the lily family, opens its flowers, ten inches wide, between 11 in the morning and 5 in the afternoon. They are of the richest royal blue, with from 150 to 200 golden stamens in the center, and they remain open four or five days. It is not generally known that there are lilies that have nocturnal habits—night bloomers as well as day bloomers. They are very punctual timekeepers, too, opening and closing with commendable regularity.

Bunyan's Wicket Gate.

In the village of Elstow there is abundant material that is visibly associated with John Bunyan. The isolated church tower contains the very bells in the ringing of which Bunyan rejoiced and afterward trembled. Above all there must be mentioned the wicket gate which figures early in the story of "Pilgrim's Progress." The wicket gate of "Pilgrim's Progress" is commonly represented as a garden gate or a turnpike gate, but really the term denotes a small doorway cut out of a large door. Concealed behind a tree at the west end of Elstow church is just such a small doorway in the broad wooden surface of the great door. Through this lowly opening Bunyan must often have passed when a boy.—Harper's Weekly.

The Major's Value.

"Major Bunks," said a veteran, "was a pompous chap. The boys had a good deal of fun once over his exchange.

"It seems that on a very dark night a stalwart Confederate took the major prisoner. This fact, together with the narrative of the prisoner's return to camp, was signaled to headquarters tersely:

"'Major Bunks, captured during night march, exchanged later for two plugs tobacco.'"

Doctors Are More Thorough Now.

A physician at a dinner in Denver sneered at certain Biblical miracles.

"Lazarus," he said, "was raised from the dead, and yet I don't see any dead folks being raised in our time."

"No," said a clergyman, an eminent Biblical scholar, with a smile. "Modern medical science has progressed too far for that, eh?"—Washington Star.

Conciliatory.

Head Waiter (dignified and pompous)—Have you ordered, sir? Despairing Patron—Yes, I ordered a porterhouse steak half an hour ago, and I wish to apologize for my rudeness. With your permission I will withdraw it as an order and renew it as a suggestion.—Chicago Tribune.

Comparisons.

Small Tommy—My pa's awful smart. Little Elsie—What does he do? Small Tommy—He's a mechanic and makes locomotives. Little Elsie—That's nothing. My pa's a commuter and makes two trains every day.—Chicago News.

Good and Evil.

Nothing is truly good to a man which does not make him just, temperate, courageous and free, and nothing can be evil to a man which does not give him the contrary disposition.—Marcus Aurelius.

Significant Signals.

"Do you not see the handwriting on the wall?" asked the foreboding friend.
